The Taxation Outlook

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt yesterday left the door open for simplification of business taxes at this session of Congress, but made clear his opposition to any reduction in corporation taxes as a whole.

He told reporters that Administration tax draftsmen are still considering consolidation of four or five corporation taxes into a single percentage tax, but have reached no conclusions.

The President said there is agreement among all that regardless of the form of tax the total amount of taxes on corporations as a whole should not be decreased. The important thing, he said, is how the tax should be distributed, as between large and small corporations.

Speaker Gets No Echo

Mr. Roosevelt failed to echo the view of Speaker Bankhead that in his opinion the House Ways and Means Committee "would not be requested to make any general revision of the tax laws at this session of Congress." Bankhead said he thought "there will be no program."

Asked if the Speaker's statement and an earlier warning by Senate Majority Leader Barkley reflected his views, the President said he didn't think he had gone into that and declared the whole subject is still in the study stage.

He said Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, and Chairman Jere Cooper, of the Ways and Means tax sub-committee, have been invited to another conference at the White House today, at which time he will submit some tax figures requested by Harrison.

The President stressed one point also made by Bankhead and Harrison—the difficulties inherent in imposing a consolidated percentage tax on large and small corporations.

Of the four or five different types of corporation taxes, approximately 90 per cent of the revenue comes from the normal percentage tax levied on corporation incomes, he declared.

Difficulties Cited

If three or four of the other corporation taxes are repealed, he said, as a matter of common sense and mathematics the revenue they yield would have to be superimposed on the rest of the corporate tax structure if the revenue is to remain the same.

Speaker Bankhead at his press conference had declared that if compensatory increases were imposed on 150,000 to 160,000 small corporations, "you'd hear an awful howl all over the country."

Asked if he thought no effort would be made to remove "tax deterrents to business," the Speaker had said he did not think there were many deterrents under existing law.

"Many of them are using this matter as a pretext," said Bankhead. "The taxes are far better than what they complained of when we

Chatham, Mass., March 14 (AP).—After racing through winter seas, the huge luxury liner Conte de Savoia tonight reached the storm-battered little Norwegian freighter Belnor, in distress 700 miles east of the Virginia capes, with a crew of 25.

The Italian liner radioed that a rescue would be difficult.

Overton Plan May Net D. C. $10,000,000

New Land Estimate Adds $1,500,000 to Proposed U. S. Aid

The District may gain almost $1,500,000 extra from the Federal Government annually under provisions of the Overton formula, as a result of testimony introduced yesterday at a Senate sub-committee hearing by District Surveyor Edward A. Dent, it developed last night.

Dent revealed that 925 acres have been added to the District's land area since 1933 by reclamation projects along the Anacostia and Potomac rivers. Since the new area is Federally owned, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, who originated the proposed payment plan, said he thought the added acreage should be "written into the bill."

The acres bring the percentage of Government-owned land in the District up to 22.34 per cent. Senator Overton, reckoning with 1933 figures, has been using a 19.98 percentage. According to his formula, the Federal Government should pay toward District expenses in the same proportion it occupies space, or nearly $10,000,000 if the 22 per cent is used. This would be just about double the contribution for the current fiscal year.

Only complete and lavish approval was expressed for the Overton plan at sub-committee hearings opening yesterday. Appearing were: District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan; Robert V. Fleming, chairman of the municipal finance committee of the Board of Trade; Francis G. Addison, jr., representing the District Bankers Association; Edward F. Collady,

District Court Appointee Faces Speeding Charge

Thomas Allan Goldsborough, confirmed last month as a justice of the United States District Court here, was arrested on a speeding charge yesterday afternoon on Benning road near Oklahoma avenue northeast.

The arrest was made by Private R. T. Meyer, of the Police Traffic Bureau, who said he followed Goldsborough for seven or eight blocks.

Goldsborough, former member of the House from Maryland, was taken to the Ninth Precinct Station, where he was released on his promise to appear in Police Court March 20 to answer to the charge.

Conferees Ask 6,000 Army Planes

Senators Drop Labor Amendment To Air Expansion Bill in Compromise

Representatives of the Senate and House reached complete agreement on disputed provisions of the $358,000,000 Army air expansion bill yesterday and sped it toward final passage.

Giving way to the Senate on its amendment to fix the Army air strength at 6,000 planes instead of 5,500, the House conferees in return forced complete abandonment of the Barkley labor provision, which had nearly deadlocked proceedings and a compromise on the limitation of aircraft profits.

In agreeing to a more liberal profit ceiling for plane manufacturers, the conference committee wrote into the measure a new proposal under which the Government will subsidize research and experimentation by private companies. The plan proposed by the War Department permits it to pay part of the cost of construction of sample planes submitted by unsuccessful bidders.

Merely a Gesture

Meanwhile, it appeared the Administration plan to assist South American countries to arm through low-cost construction of warships and other armament in the United States will be little more than a gesture as far as shipbuilding is concerned.

Rear Admiral Ben Morrell, chief of the Navy Bureau of Yards and Docks, told a Senate committee that both Government and private shipyards here will be filled with naval and merchant marine work for the next ten years.

The plan, however, also contemplates the construction of coast and antiaircraft guns in the United States and the co-operation of this Government with Latin-American states by furnishing them latest type plans and assistance in building warships in their own yards.

Other developments were:

President Roosevelt asked Congress to appropriate $14,700,000 immediately, plus a contract authorization of $2,300,000, to "increase the security of Panama Canal structures and facilities." The estimate, it was stated, constitutes the first increment of a two-year program to cost $29,000,000 in all.

Canal Hearings Opened

The House Merchant Marine Committee began hearings on several proposals to strengthen America's "lifeline" by building an alternate route between the Atlantic and Pacific. Chairman Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, said the group will hear proponents of the proposed Nicaraguan and Yucatan canals today and receive testimony from Administration spokesmen tomorrow in executive session. The Administration has recommended against a new canal, but may support a plan to build a new set of locks at Panama.

Representative Izac (Democrat), California, retired naval officer and author of a bill to construct a $500,000,000 canal across Nicaragua, told the committee that sabotage of the Panama Canal would be a "very simple matter," while with two such routes the defense of both coasts would be assured.

Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles indorsed the proposal to aid Latin-American nations in arms production, as fostering "the growing spirit of American solidarity" and a "necessary step in the interests of national defense."

At his press conference, President Roosevelt emphasized that the plan does not involve loans to prospective arms purchasers.

The House Naval Affairs Committee in reporting a bill to spend $38,524,000 for new drydocks and other construction at Navy yards and stations, told the House that docking facilities in Hawaii and the West Coast are inadequate

250 German Tanks Reportedly Meet Stiff Resistance On Way to Brunn

By Melvin K. Whiteleather
(Associated Press Staff Correspondent)

Prague (Wednesday), March 15.—The Czech ministry of national defense announced at 4:30 a. m. today (10:30 p. m., Eastern standard time) that the central Czech provinces of Bohemia and Moravia would be occupied by German troops at 6 a. m. (midnight, Tuesday, Eastern standard time).

The announcement was made by radio.

The population was told it should not resist, since resistance would be against the interest of the Czech people.

Events Follow Swiftly

This startling dawn announcement came after a night and day of swift events marking a sudden crumbling of the post-Munich Czech republic.

German troops already were marching across northern Slovakia, and already had taken military possession of several towns.

Farther eastward, in Carpatho-Ukraine, Hungarian troops were moving quickly northward toward the Polish border, and by this morning were half way across the country.

Polish troops were reported moving to meet the Hungarians, with whom Poland has long desired a common border.

There were unconfirmed reports Rumania had occupied 20 or more villages in the far eastern tip of Carpatho-Ukraine.

Church Bells Toll

At the announcement that German troops would march into the very heart of ancient Czech territory—territory spared by last September's Munich settlement—church bells began to toll.

Despite the early hour, the word spread like wildfire through Bohemia.

The orders had come from Berlin, where the Czech president, Dr. Emil Hacha, had conferred for three hours with the Fuehrer. They parted at 4:15 a. m. (10:15 p. m., Tuesday, E. S. T.).

The population already was on the alert after a day and night of tense developments which piled up with speed and drama beginning early Tuesday, when the Slovak Parliament met in solemn session in Bratislava and announced it was breaking away from the Prague government and establishing itself as an independent state under protection of mighty Germany.

Hungary Moves In

After that Hungary moved into Carpatho-Ukraine, leaving, nominally, only Bohemia-Moravia to the Prague government. These provinces—last remnant of the World War born republic—apparently were falling into oblivion this morning.

The Czech defense ministry's solemn announcement was repeated over the air every five minutes. It read:

"Attention! Attention! Order from the President of the republic! Order from the minister of national defense to all formations:

"German army infantry and aircraft are beginning occupation of the republic's territory at 6 a. m. Their advance must not be resisted.

"The slightest resistance will bring most unforeseen consequences. In that case they would intervene with utter brutality.

"All commands have to obey the order. The units will be disarmed. Military and civil airplanes must

Remnants of War-Born Democracy Become Virtual Colony of Germany; Hitler Guarantees Autonomous Development; Carpatho-Ukraine's Fate Undecided

End of a War-Born Republic

REICHSFUEHRER HITLER today at dawn took under his "protection" the Czech people, making a clean sweep of the post-war republic. Official announcement came from Berlin after a momentous three-hour conference with President Hacha of the Prague government.

GERMAN TROOPS, already across the borders of Bohemia-Moravia at several points, were to accomplish full occupation today, the Prague defense ministry radio announced, and Czech troops and civilians were ordered to offer no resistance.

RUMANIA'S ARMY reportedly entered the eastern end of Carpatho-Ukraine, and seized about 20 villages. Carol's cabinet was in emergency session.

HUNGARY SENT AN ARMY northward into Carpatho-Ukraine, and early today was reported nearing the Polish border; Budapest rejected Prague's reply to an ultimatum to evacuate the province.

POLISH TROOPS ALSO were reported pouring into Carpatho-Ukraine from the north, presumably seeking to establish the common border with Hungary long desired by both countries.

SLOVAKIA PROCLAIMED ITS independence after its first premier told the parliament Hitler had promised military aid if necessary. The new republic was expected to become a vassal of Berlin.

CARPATHO-UKRAINE, eastern tip of the dismembered state, also was reported to have declared its independence through Premier Volosin, who was later reported to have fled to Rumania.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA'S CABINET resigned as its army retreated before invaders, offering only sporadic resistance; between 10,000 and 20,000 troops were isolated in Carpatho-Ukraine, in the path of all four invading armies.

GREAT BRITAIN installed anti-aircraft guns on London rooftops after the mysterious arrival of 11 unidentified Czechs, although both Britain and France had been inclined to let Central Europe's crisis work itself out.

Fate Placed in Germany's Hands

By Louis P. Lochner
By Associated Press Staff Correspondent.

Berlin (Wednesday), March 15.—The German Reich of Adolf Hitler today took under its "protection" the home of the Czechs—Bohemia and Moravia—making a clean sweep of the post-war Czecho-Slovak republic.

The European democracies, Britain and France, and others who helped create the republic as a part of the World War settlement, lifted no finger.

German troops began moving into the territory of the Czechs at 6 a. m. (midnight, E. S. T.) as the Prague radio warned the stricken citizenry not to resist the advance.

Hitler promised an undisclosed degree of autonomy would be guaranteed the Czechs, although it was believed the German occupation would be permanent and would give Hitler a domain stretching far eastward toward the Russian Ukraine, which he dreams of making a vassal state.

Slovakia Declares Independence

As a result the cabinet at Prague resigned and President Emil Hacha hurried to Berlin for a conference with the German Fuehrer.

The German communique issued early today after their historic three-hour talk ending at 4:15 a. m. (10:15 p. m. Tuesday, E. S. T.) said the Czech president had "trustingly" placed the the fate of his people and his country in the Fuehrer's hands.

Czecho-Slovakia had been split into three parts by Slovakia's separation and the federal Czecho-Slovak State declared officially dissolved.

The premier of the eastern province of Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia) had followed suit with a similar declaration—which Hungary disregarded as her troops pressed into the province and reached halfway across it toward the frontier of Poland.

Czechs, submitting to a Hungarian ultimatum, were withdrawing their troops.

Ruthenia's Fate in Doubt

The fate of that province, however, remained in doubt as Rumania was reported to have occupied some Carpatho-Ukraine villages near her frontier. Polish troops were reported reinforced along the northern frontier of the narrow mountainous corridor, and German troops were reported marching in that direction across Slovakia.

With this situation before it, the conference in Hitler's study this morning had only to dispose of the fate of the two western Czech provinces.

The official attitude of the British and French, who in last September's Sudeten crisis were almost drawn into war over the little republic, was that no "unprovoked aggression" had occurred to cause them to consider binding their guarantees to go to the Czechs' aid.

Hitler was "invited" into Austria a year ago—March 11, 1938—and formally announced the annexation two days later.

He was "invited" Monday by the deposed premier of Slovakia.

Hungarians Capture 30 Carpathian Towns

March to Join Polish Troops in Common Frontier

By International News Service.

Budapest (Wednesday), March 15. Marching southward to co-operate in the occupation of the Carpatho-Ukraine, and help fulfill the long-cherished dream of a common Hungarian-Polish frontier, Polish troops have crossed the border, the semi-official Hungarian news agency said today.

Hungarian forces, after a series of battles with Czech troops which ended in complete Czech capitulation to a 12-hour ultimatum, took more than 30 Carpathian villages and advanced as far north as Szoljva.

Partial mobilization at the same time was ordered in Hungary.

German quarters in Bratislava, Slovakia, said 60,000 Hungarian troops were en route to Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia).

How long Germany will tolerate Polish-Hungarian seizure of Carpatho-Ukraine, which amounts to creation of a barrier to the Reich's historic aspirations for control of the Soviet Ukraine, was a matter of of keen speculation in diplomatic quarters today.

Sanctioned by Germany

Germany tacitly sanctioned the Hungarian move, apparently aiming at the moment to keep Hungary satisfied, and to put Hungary under further obligation to the Reich.

But later on, according to informed German circles, Berlin will demand a plebiscite in Ruthenia, and if it turns out against Hungary, Germany will call for Hungary's evacuation.

Many were killed and wounded on both sides when the waves of Hungarians moved suddenly across the border early yesterday, north of Munkacs.

Fighting extended along the entire frontier as the Hungarians progressively swept through Svalava, Konderske, Klastromalja, Torhegyala, and dozens of other cities. In many of the towns Hungarian flags were hoisted by the villagers. For some time shots were heard at border points, but early today everything was quiet and the Czech troops were clearing out.

London Sets Up Antiaircraft Guns In Fleet Street

By International News Service.

London (Wednesday), March 15.—Antiaircraft guns were placed on rooftops in Fleet street at 3:30 a. m. today exactly as they were during the Szecho-Slovakian crisis last September.

No official explanation of the foreboding act was forthcoming immediately. The belief was that protective armaments were installed at other strategic points in the British metropolis.

Artillerymen could be seen atop the newspaper offices along the famous street of publishers, in the heart of the city.

Mysterious developments in London began with the arrival of 11 Czechs in a chartered plane.

Within 20 minutes after their plane was set down at Croyden Airport, the British foreign office instructed airport officials to keep the Czechs' identity in "utmost secrecy."

Britain's attitude in the Czech crisis, as set forth by Prime Minister Chamberlain, is that the separatist movements are none of this country's concern.

Churchill Assails Nazis

In answer to opposition questions in the House of Commons, where Laborite Leader Clement R. Atlee accused the government of merely awaiting an accomplished fact in Central Europe, Chamberlain explained that under the Munich agreement Britain was not obliged to protect Czecho-Slovakia's territorial integrity.

"The proposed guarantee of the frontiers was against unprovoked aggression," he said. "No such aggression has taken place."

Winston Churchill delivered a terrific anti-Nazzi blast in a speech last night. Saying it was his duty to "point out the truth," he commented:

"Czecho-Slovakia is being broken up before our eyes. Their gold is being stolen by the Nazis.

"The Nazi system is to block out every form of international freedom."

Mrs. Stinson Says Artist Kept Their Union 'Spiritual'

Wealthy, 54-year-old Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson staved off legal interruptions and nervous collapse all day yesterday while she told Justice Luhring she was drugged into marrying a versatile artist who spent her money "like a drunken sailor."

Less hardy was Official Stenographer Lucius V. Friedli. After hours of frantic efforts to keep up both with Mrs. Stinson's breathless narrative and its obligatos of sparring between lawyers and admonition from the bench, Friedli—for the first time in his career—threw up his hands and gasped to Justice Luhring:

"Your honor, I can't take it any longer."

Justice Luhring called a recess.

Mrs. Stinson testified all day, with several other recesses for her benefit, in her action for an annulment of her marriage to florid, erect Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, 56, who had been an engineer, State Department lawyer, would-be author and, she said, Mrs. Stinson's unwelcome husband.

She also has sued to cancel a $230,000 trust fund by which he was to

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Aboard S. S. Matsonia, March 14.
CENSORED AT SEA

To my astonishment, I discovered the ship's captain can censor any radiogram sent from the ship. Washington's FCC holds him responsible for any news dispatch filed with his wireless operator, and even for news tidbits that might slip into private messages.

So he must initial his approval on anything the wireless operator thinks is newsy.

Jackson Reynolds . . . confesses

Occasionally both the operator and the captain must be puzzled. I saw a message sent last night by a movie starlet to a Hollywood studio which read cryptically:

"Now they're dunking half dollars in Honolulu harbor. May I dive?"

It sounded a little like a code message.

At the risk of the captain's censorship, I must register a complaint against the enormous quantities of excellent food to which we weak-willed passengers are exposed.

By the standards of the Washington hotels a hungry or greedy gent or lady can eat $25 or $30 worth of food a day, and some of them do.

"—$30 worth of food a day"

All you can eat is included in your passage. This may mean fish, eggs and steak for breakfast, if your eyes are as big as your stomach is going to be; a midmorning snack served on deck; a lunch that would cost you $6.00 or $7.00 at the Willard; tea in midafternoon; caviar and anchovies with the predinner cocktail; an 11-course dinner, and, after the evening movies, come caviar and turkey sandwiches. It's more dangerous for the waistline than the hors d'oeuvres at the Russian Embassy.

One of my fellow passengers is Col. Steichen, the famed photographer, whom I last saw when he was chief of the AEF Air Corps photographic section in France.

In no small degree he is responsible for the rash of cameras visible on the ship's decks and everywhere else, a phenomenon he regards with indulgent interest.

He must be secretly pleased, though, when he sees one of the globe trotters equipped with four cameras; two movie, one loaded with color film and one with black and white; an expensive candid camera that looks as complex as an airplane instrument board, and a plain old-fashioned camera that he falls back on to be sure he's getting a picture.

"—gentleman with four cameras"

Several of the ship's officers belong to the Naval Reserve, but they seldom train with the regular Navy. For one thing, they're too busy hauling Americans back and forth across the Pacific; for another, the Navy regards its big maneuvers like the current Caribbean games as too ultra-secret for even its high ranking reservists.

We have been seated at the captain's table, which is an excellent clearing house for all the legends of the Pacific and the Islands. My favorite thus far is Capt. Frank Johnson's tale, for which he himself does not vouch, that there is only one overcoat in Honolulu's fashionable set, and that islanders take turns using it for trips to the mainland.

But there's a heating plant in Honolulu's new postoffice, in readiness for cold waves when the thermometer falls to 65 above.

SHIP'S CAVIAR: That sardonic financier, Jackson Reynolds, is on board, and when introduced to old ladies he delights to begin his conversation by confessing that his real name is Updyke . . . After announcing firmly that I would not play keno, I was dragged into the salon by the b. w. and won $28.25 . . . There's a paddle tennis court on the boat deck, and after several matches I predict the game will sweep the country. This court is made of steel and asphalt, and cost $8,000, but a standard court can be built for $600.

Wile Foresees Roosevelt Draft If Dewey Runs

Instinct of self-preservation may force the Democratic Party to draft Roosevelt for President in 1940, if the Republicans nominate Dewey, Frederic William Wile, newspaper columnist told the Civitan Club of Washington yesterday.

Referring to the Senate controversy over foreign policy, Wile said that "far from leading us down the road to war, the President is taking us along the pathway of peace by letting all the world know on which side the moral sympathies of the United States are to be found if the dictators challenge the democracies."

Battle Brews On Roosevelt's WPA Demands

In immediate response to a Presidential message yesterday asking $150,000,000 for the WPA to meet "the very serious situation which exists," a meeting of the House subcommittee handling relief was called for this morning by Chairman Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, while lines were being formed in Congress for a full-fledged battle over the Government's work relief policy.

Even before President Roosevelt's message giving the "cold facts" on the situation had been read to the House, Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, announced he would offer a resolution empowering the Appropriations Committee to make "a full investigation of the WPA" to determine what it is, "fish or fowl, good or bad." His resolution was introduced later.

Cox, long a thorn in the side of the New Deal, told The Post last night that he had not intended to speak on his resolution until he learned yesterday morning that Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, had been deposed as acting chairman of the appropriations sub-committee that will consider the bill.

Taylor Supplants Woodrum

Chairman Taylor, who took over the reins of the sub-committee on request of Speaker Bankhead and Majority Leader Rayburn, is a proponent of speedy action on the relief bill, while Woodrum is known to favor an inquiry into the WPA.

The "purge" of Woodrum from his post as acting chairman of the sub-committee threatened yesterday to backfire on the Administration, because of the Virginia Representative's personal popularity and because of resentment among conservative Democrats against alleged "high-pressure" methods.

On the other hand, Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, indicated yesterday a bloc of Congressmen from urban districts would be formed in support of the WPA, and Representatives Cullen and Sirovich (Democrats), of New York, told The Post the entire New York State Democratic delegation—25 members—will back the President in his demand for further relief funds.

The immediate question, however, is in the disposition of the supplement appropriation at the hands of the sub-committee. Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, is the only witness scheduled for today's hearing. It is certain that some of the sub-committee's 12 members will wish to question him at length.

In fact, if Taylor attempts to drive the $150,000,000 appropriation bill (which he introduced in the House yesterday) through the sub-committee with only abbreviated hearings, he is likely to meet stiff opposition from the four Republicans and two or three of the Democrats.

2,996,00 on WPA Rolls

In his message, President Roosevelt stated that "a careful checkup shows that there has been no substantial change in the conditions of unemployment" since January. He said that 2,996,000 persons are on the WPA rolls, while about 850,000 are on the waiting list.

Asserting that "improvement in business conditions between now and June will result in substantial increase in employment," the President warned that this increase will result in the employment of not more than 300,000 persons now on the relief rolls or awaiting assignment.

If no further funds are appropriated for the rest of the fiscal year President Roosevelt said that 400,000 relief workers will be dropped during the first week of April, 600,000 in the first week of May and 200,000 "early in June," leaving about 7,800,000 on the rolls.

4 Million Would Be Effected

"The number of persons, including dependents, affected by this reduction will be 4,000,000 within the next few weeks and nearly 1,000,000 more later on," said the President.

"I cannot bring myself to believe that these discharged men and women will contribute to the prosperity of the United States, nor do I believe that the merchants and landlords they are now dealing with will become more prosperous when their trade ceases," he declared.

Answering the contention—propounded by Representative Woodrum and others—that relief should be restored to the States and localities, President Roosevelt said, "I am of the opinion that States, counties and municipalities are doing, in the overwhelming majority of cases, all that their finances will permit to meet the situation.

Representative Cox said that a special appropriation would be necessary for a WPA investigation, adding that $30,000 is the sum I have in mind."

Observers thought that if the question of $150,000,000 ever is brought to a roll-call vote in the House, it would pass by a wide majority.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 14.—The British Prime Minister's recent hint that England may call a disarmament conference this summer, inviting the United States to join, comes at a time when many Americans have lost faith in disarmament intentions of European countries.

GALLUP

The majority of voters in a survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion are opposed to holding an arms conference at this time and their vote reflects a progressive disillusionment with the disarmament principle in recent months. Less than two years ago the holding of a disarmament conference was popularly favored. A year ago sentiment was evenly divided. Today the voters are nearly 6 to 4 "futile" or "impractical" at this against an arms parley if held at this time.

Voters were asked: "Would you favor a conference of the leading nations to reduce the size of all armies and navies at this time?"

The same issue was put to voters last year and the year before, with the following results:

	Yes.	No.
June, 1937	56%	44%
July, 1938	48	52
Today	43	57

The underlying causes of present-day opposition are indicated by voters themselves in explaining their opinions. Upon analysis these statements show that the shift in disarmament sentiment has come about for several reasons.

First, a large group of voters take the attitude that even when European countries were more inclined to live up to their international pledges than they are today, disarmament programs were not a lasting success. These voters argue that with countries like Germany and Italy continually breaking promises a new disarmament parley would be "futile or "impractical" at this time. Many others add that the international tension would almost certainly mean failure for an arms parley and that this failure would merely contribute to further public disillusionment.

Those voters who, on the other hand, favor calling a conference today argue that the armament race, if continued, will inevitably lead to war. They think that at least some effort should be made to halt the race, not only in the interests of peace but also because "too much money is being wasted on arms."

But the survey also finds that even those voters who believe in disarmament conferences do not think President Roosevelt should take the lead in calling one. They believe that disarmament is primarily Europe's problem. Of all voters who favor holding a conference at this time less than a third want Roosevelt to call it, and this number is considerably lower than it was two years ago.

The question put to all voters who favor a conference was: "Should President Roosevelt call this disarmament conference?"

Roosevelt Call Conference?	Yes.	No.
June, 1937	41%	59%
July, 1938	37	63
Today	28	72

The survey results also make it clear that political party affiliation makes little or no difference in attitude toward disarmament. Republican voters are against holding a conference at this time by 57 per cent, Democratic voters by 59 per cent.

Reorganization Bill Reported Out to Senate

Slight Changes Made; Wheeler Amendment Is Obstacle to Passage

With only minor alterations, the Senate Committee on Reorganization yesterday favorably reported to the Senate the modified Warren-Cochran Government reorganization bill passed last week by the House.

Reporting the measure, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, asked Senate consideration of the bill tomorrow.

One major obstacle remained in the path of the bill—the Wheeler amendment, requiring approval by both Houses of Congress of any reorganization plan submitted by the President. As passed by the House, and reported yesterday to the Senate, merger plans would become law in 60 days unless stopped by a vote of both Houses.

Overriden in committee on two minor charges, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, reserved his fight for the Wheeler amendment for the Senate floor. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, whose amendment came within four votes of approval last session, will again sponsor the modification. He said the amendment's chances "look good." Eleven of the Senators who voted against the amendment last session were not returned.

Byrd will offer a series of amendments placing emphasis on economy objectives, but will leave Wheeler amendment strategy largely to his colleagues.

Changes in the House bill ordered by the Senate committee yesterday increase from 20 minutes to 2 hours the debate limitation on motions to discharge committees from merger plans submitted by the President. Debate limitation on the actual merger plans would be moved up from 10 hours to 20 hours.

"The committee feels the limits on debate in the House bill are too strict and that more time should be allowed for debate on a subject of such importance as reorganization plans," Byrnes said in his report to the Senate.

Two of the agencies exempted from reorganization by the House—the Employes' Compensation Commission and the Tariff Commission—were made subject to merger by the Senate committee. Three other agencies were added to the "exempt list"—the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Mississippi River Commission.

To provisions of the House bill guaranteeing a year's appointment preference to employes losing their jobs through mergers, another subsection was added by the Senate committee. It provides that in any transfer of personnel through mergers, changes in classification or compensation shall not be made until sufficient time has elapsed to allocate employes to their proper grades.

Ford Co. Accuses Labor Board of 'A Fixed Bias'

By the Associated Press.

The Ford Motor Co., filing 273 exceptions to a proposed labor board decision against it, accused the board yesterday of having "a fixed bias and a fixed prejudice against employers in general."

The company particularly excepted to the "failure of the board to take into consideration the sit-down strikes which were prevailing at the time (1937) of the event dealt with in the decision," asserting these events were essential to an understanding of the evidence.

Many of the exceptions dealt with evidence as to the row at gate 4 of the River Rouge plant May 26, 1937, when several union organizers were beaten.

Greenback Act Defended By Roosevelt

Urges Its Retention as 'Good Club' to Keep if Inflation Is Needed

President Roosevelt yesterday fell back on the economies of Mother Hubbard in opposing repeal of the provision in the so-called Thomas inflation amendment authorizing him to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks.

Asked to comment on a repeal bill introduced by Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, he said he did not think the power should be repealed, although in all probability it never will be used. It is a good club to keep in the closet, he remarked.

Then, on second thought, he said he felt Mother Hubbard would offer a more apt analogy. It would be a good idea, he said, to keep a little spare food in the back of the cupboard. Mother Hubbard would not find the cupboard bare.

SEC Relaxation Asked

The President's remarks were the first intimation from an official source that this rusty discretionary power was regarded as anything more than a dead letter. A part of the Thomas amendment to the 1933 agricultural adjustment act was forced on the Administration by inflationists in Congress.

Other developments bearing on the business and monetary situation:

Leaders of the Nation's stock exchanges, concluding a two-day conference at the Shoreham Hotel, recommended that the Securities and Exchange Commission undertake sweeping changes in the securities act to stimulate industrial expansion to utilize the country's unprecedented money resources.

T. Jefferson Coolidge, former Undersecretary of the Treasury who resigned because of disagreement over Administration fiscal policies, opposed before the Senate Banking Committee the Administration bill to continue the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and the power to cut the gold content of the dollar.

Daniel W. Bell, who has resigned as acting budget director effective April 15, will handle thereafter, in his capacity as Assistant to the Secretary, the fiscal duties previously devolving on Wayne C. Taylor. The latter resigned recently because of differences with Morgenthau.

Under the so-called Thomas inflation amendment, the President can direct the Secretary of the Treasury to issue greenbacks to retire or buy up Government securities up to a $3,000,000,000 limit. The fiat currency could not be issued to take care of current expenditures.

Even Talk Inflationary

Use of the power, regarded by conservatives as monetary T. N. T., would be highly inflationary. An inflationary "kick" can be given business, in fact, by merely talking about it. This is believed to be the chief value the President sees in it. Thus his Mother Hubbard remarks fit in with his business recovery drive.

Congressional inflationists and quantitative money theorists, however, argue that, instead of borrowing money and paying interest on it, the Government should make money by resorting to the printing press. Some of the inflationists would like to experiment with a light sprinkle of greenbacks to try to boost farm prices.

Heads of the New York and other stock exchanges urged the SEC to sponsor the following program:

Changes in the securities and exchange act to differentiate between "harmful" and "beneficial" stock manipulation.

Simplification of stock registration statements.

Coolidge declared the Administration's action in cutting the gold content of the dollar to 59.06 per cent in 1934 had flooded the country's banks with money because of the resulting heavy gold inflow from abroad. Money depreciation is possible, even in the present situation, he declared.

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach often pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over. Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes these little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in no time and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

On Capitol Hill

By the Associated Press.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, protested yesterday when other Senators said the $2,000,000,000 Treasury stabilization fund resulted from profits the Government made on devaluation of the dollar.

GLASS

"It did not represent any profit," the Virginian said. "It represented a seizure."

Glass made his comment at a Senate hearing on legislation to extend administration monetary powers, including the stabilization fund.

State and local employes will not have to pay Federal income tax on their back incomes, the Internal Revenue Bureau promised yesterday. Although a Supreme Court decision last year made possible both future and retroactive taxation of incomes of such employes, revenue officials said they would make "no effort" to enforce collection of the back income.

Legislation is pending to eliminate the retroactive power.

Opposition to placing life insurance agents in the social security system was voiced by representatives of life insurance companies before the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Social Security Board recommended inclusion of agents. C. B. Robbins, of Chicago, speaking for the American Life Convention, and Robert L. Hogg, of New York, spokesman for the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, described the plan as impractical.

Life insurance agents are generally independent contractors instead of employes, they contended.

The Senate voted to retain eight customs positions which the House had decided to abolish as useless. It approved a recommendation of its Appropriations Committee that $51,600 be included in the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill to pay salaries of the surveyor of customs at New York and comptrollers of customs at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Chicago and San Francisco.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, proposed creation of a "national fuel and power commission" to regulate the prices of coal and competing fuels on "an equitable basis." It would take over the duties of the Bituminous Coal Commission.

Dirksen told the House the coal industry was being strangled by growing competition from water power, petroleum and natural gas, over which, he said, there was little or no regulation.

Treasury Converts $1,266,973,000 in Note

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau disclosed yesterday that $1,266,973,300 of series A-1939 notes, maturing on June 15, have been exchanged out of a total of $1,293,714,200, indicating that $26,740,900 will be redeemed in cash.

A total of $894,415,600 of notes were exchanged for 2¾ per cent bonds of 1960-65, $319,444,500 for 2½ per cent bonds of 1950-52, and $53,113,200 for 1⅛ per cent notes, series B-1943.

U. S. Carries 'Final' Plea to Struck Hotels

Pickets Stand Aside As Chief Conciliator Visits Managers

The pickets outside the fashionable Shoreham Hotel last night broke their "chain" long enough to permit Dr. John R. Steelman, conciliation chief of the Labor Department, to enter for a conference with the operators of 13 strike-bound hotels.

It was the first such conference since the big strike started a week ago today, and Dr. Steelman was prepared to make a "final, desperate effort" to break the deadlock.

Presumably Dr. Steelman asked the hotel operators to accept in toto the peace plan which it was reported on Sunday they had accepted partially.

Peace Plan's High Lights

This plan has never been made public, but it is understood that its high lights were these:

The union would forego the absolute closed ship to the extent of not requiring nonunion employes now in the hotels to join the union.

Those hired in the future would be required to join the union.

Arbitration machinery would be set up to handle grievances, including discharges.

It was reported that the hotel men agreed to ask the union for all needed employes, but reserved the right to go into the open market for help if the union was unable to meet their needs. It was reported further that the hotel men were willing to ask a new nonunion employe to join the union if he were replacing a union worker, but were opposed to the demand that all new employes be required to join the union. On the issue of grievances, the hotel men were said to have pointed out that the National Labor Relations Board could very well handle cases of discrimination against union workers.

Talk Nine Hours

Union representatives have accused the hotels of trying to smash their organization. The hotel men deny this and say that, in a service with such intimate relationship to the public, they cannot surrender the management of their houses to the union. The union men insist that they are not trying to interfere with the management, but merely trying to protect and strengthen their organization.

For nine hours yesterday, representatives of the hotel operators and representatives of the union conferred at the Labor Department. It was shortly after 6 p. m. when the conference broke up.

Joseph McGarraghy, attorney for the hotel men, was silent as he left.

Samuel Levine, attorney for the strike committee, said the deadlock "is just as bad as it ever was."

Strike Leaders Meet

Dr. Steelman agreed that no headway had been made, but then announced he would meet with the 13 hotel operators at the Shoreham at 8 p. m.

While Dr. Steelman was meeting the hotel operators, the strikers' joint executive board also was in session.

Manager R. L. Pollio, of the Mayflower Hotel, announced last night the serving of a banquet for more than 800 members of the Daughters of the American Revolution in the grand ballroom. At the same time, he announced that three organizations are dining at the Mayflower tonight—the Phi Sigma Kappa Fraternity, the Sons of the American Revolution and the Washington Traffic Club.

The Mississippi State Society canceled a dance scheduled for tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel. President of the society is Ellen Woodward, member of the Social Security Board.

Montgomery Blair P.-T. A. to Meet

A panel discussion on "How and What Vocations to Select" will be conducted tonight at 8 o'clock by the Montgomery Blair Parent-Teacher Association at the Montgomery Blair High School in Silver Spring, Md., J. E. Bacon, president of the association, announced last night.

Dr. Harry A. Jager, of the office of education, Interior epartment; L. H. Dennis, of the American Vocational Association, and Floyd Cromwell, Maryland State vocational education director, will speak.

Eastern Air's Mechanics to Strike April 14

Pay at Issue in First Big Walkout Facing Air Transport Industry

By the United Press.

Chicago, March 14.—President A. P. Martin, of the Air Line Mechanics Association, International, announced tonight that union members employed by Eastern Air Lines have voted to strike April 14.

It would be the first national walkout in the air transport industry.

The A. L. M. A. is an independent union.

Martin said the management had served notice yesterday it would not enter an agreement to arbitrate remaining issues of the controversy. He said the wage scale was the principal point of dispute.

The union demands 85 cents an hour for journeyman mechanics and 85 cents to $1.15 an hour for experienced mechanics.

Martin said the A. L. M. A. had submitted a wage-hour proposal to E. V. Rickenbacker, president of Eastern Air Lines, in October, 1937. Two months later, he said, the A. L. M. A. won a collective bargaining election.

After negotiations between the union and management failed, Martin asserted, the National Mediation Board began efforts last June to settle the dispute. A mediation board suggested the controversy be submitted to a board of arbitration, Martin said. He asserted the union was willing to arbitrate.

New England Sees Flood Threat

Boston, March 14 (I.N.S.).—New England was on guard tonight against the threat of floods as rising temperatures began to melt huge snow drifts piled up by the worst blizzard in 50 years which blanketed the six States and left 23 persons dead.

Gov. Saltonstall of Massachusetts said, however, there was no immediate cause for alarm.

Pedestrian Law Test Is Postponed Until March 22

Washington will have to wait another week for an official court ruling on validity of the new pedestrian control law. The first "test" case, involving Bernard Klateman, 27-year-old florist, accused of crossing a street contrary to a red signal light, was continued until March 22 yesterday by Traffic Court Judge McMahon.

Klateman pleaded not guilty when arraigned and announced he will fight the new regulations "to the limit."

Milk 'Bootleg' Case Against Ward Dropped; Hearing of Two Dairy Companies Postponed

Eight charges were filed in Police Court yesterday against the Fairfax Farms-Embassy Dairies in connection with the alleged importation of 2,480 gallons of so-called "bootleg" cream on March 4. Seven of the counts were against the Fairfax concern and one against the Embassy.

At the same time, Corporation Counsel Seal announced court action against James J. Ward, president of the two dairies, and Pinkey Alexander, a colored employe, would be dropped. The litigation, he said, would involve only the companies.

Cases Continued

At the request of Defense Counsel Robert Lynch the cases were continued by Judge Hobart Newman until March 23. Lynch pointed out that an important witness, John Kreis, injured when the cream was seized by authorities, would be unable to appear for "at least 10 days."

Daniel B. Maher, another attorney for the dairies, in upholding the reputed shipment, announced that an analysis of the questioned cream by the District Health Department under the direction of Dr. Reed R. Ashwood disclosed the product was pure and of a quality equal to cream produced in the local milkshed.

The seized cream shipment was reported to have been brought here from Lafayette, Ind. Instigated by the House District Committee, a Congressional investigation of the local milk situation will be started as soon as funds are made available.

Eight Charges Filed

In addition to a joint charge of failing to identify the dairy truck, other counts filed against the Fairfax company were:

Handling an interstate shipment of cream which had not been produced or handled in accordance with the specifications of an authorized medical milk commission or State board of health.

Shipping the cream from Lafayette for the purpose of manufacturing into ice cream without the medical supervision.

Handling cream which, while pasteurized, was not open to inspection of the District health officer.

Receiving an interstate shipment of cream without ascertaining from the District health officer that the person from whom the cream was obtained possessed a license to send the cream into the District.

Keeping a storage place and acting through its officers preventing authorized agents of the District Health Department from inspecting said storage place.

Storing 2,000 gallons of cream shipped interstate without having obtained a permit to do so and without having made application for such a permit.

remain in airports. None must take to the air."

German troops, according to a report telephoned from Moravska Ostrava, on the border between Germany and Czecho-Slovakia, were advancing through northern Slovakia in what appeared to be a strategic maneuver to block the Poles from attempting to join forces with either Czechs or Hungarians.

The German troops, marching toward the Tatra Mountains in the direction of Carpatho-Ukraine, were reported to have reached Zilina at 10:30 p. m. and to be continuing on eastward. Zilina is 50 miles southeast of Moravska-Ostrava.

Presence of at least three foreign armies in the crumbling republic, and possibly a fourth not far away, created a tinder box of the entire reign.

Czechs Retreat Westerly

Germans were advancing eastward in Slovakia while 20,000 Czechs were retiring westward in the same area from Carpatho-Ukraine.

Hungary, during the day, had given the Prague government an ultimatum demanding the Czechs evacuate Carpatho-Ukraine, and Hungarian troops marched into the province long before expiration of the ultimatum—3 p. m. (9 a. m., Eastern standard time) tomorrow.

(The Hungarian government announced Prague's reply was unsatisfactory.)

German troops occupied Moravska-Ostrava in the early evening and began moving eastward. Another German column was expected to cross the frontier from the south and occupy Brunn during the night.

[Reports from Vienna said 250 German tanks en route to Brunn encountered stiff Czech resistance, the International New Service reported from Berlin. Outcome of the clash, the first reported in German quarters, was not stated.—Editor's note.]

Slovakia and Carpatho-Ukraine crumbled away under German and Hungarian pressure.

The 20-year-old federal republic was formally dissolved by what was left of its government, five and a half months after its first dismemberment by the great powers of Europe at Munich.

A rapid chain of developments began when Slovakia, a third of the nation, under Reichsfuehrer Hitler's guidance declared its independence of the central Prague government.

Rudolf Beran, premier of the federal cabinet, submitted his government's resignation to President Hacha.

Bands of youths, shouting "Long live Gajda!"—the Fascist leader, Gen. Rudolph Gajda, who hopes to come to power here — milled through Prague streets tonight.

Hitler, in Berlin, was dictating the Czechs' immediate future to Hacha and Foreign Minister Frantisek Chvalkovsky.

Hungary, in the ultimatum expiring tomorrow, demanded the yielding of Carpatho-Ukraine, the easternmost section of the shattered republic, formed from the former Austro-Hungarian empire by the Versailles peace treaty and dismembered last October and November by Germany, Poland and Hungary.

Trustworthy Czech quarters said that Czech troops and gendarmes had been ordered to withdraw into Roumania and not resist the incoming Hungarians. The Czechs were said to have withstood the Hungarian advance four hours when the orders were issued.

100 Reported Killed

The report circulated that 100 were killed or hurt at Chust, capital of Carpatho-Ukraine, in a clash between Czech troops and Carpatho-Ukrainians.

The Prague office of the famous Wittkowitz iron and steel works said the manager of their main works at Moravska-Ostrava (Maehrisch-Ostrau, which remained Czech territory after the September 29 Munich dismemberment) telephoned that German troops had marched in there tonight, and were facing Polish troops across the Czecho-Polish border.

Czech newspaper reports from Moravska-Ostrava described the march of German troops into that city in the late afternoon.

These reports said that when the German tanks arrived, the citizens stood up in front of them and started singing the Czech national anthem.

The Germans, it was reported, thereupon fired two volleys into the air. The crowd dispersed and the tanks moved on.

Later there were more demonstrations of Czech patriotism and more shots were fired.

The commander of the occupational army, it was said, assumed the powers of governor and under his instruction the vice burgomaster of Moravska-Ostrava ordered the citizens to go home.

It was understood in Prague that the German troops were moving on in an easterly direction.

There were some minor demonstrations in Prague about 11:30 o'clock tonight when police broadcast a prohibition against loitering. As a result the streets thereafter were deserted.

German troops, after occupying Moravska-Ostrava, continued on toward Frydek, Mistek and Zilina. Reports said clashes occurred at Frydek.

The German military governor of Morovska-Ostrava ordered a curfew between 9 p. m. and 6 a. m., decreeing that no one without military passes would be allowed in the streets between these hours.

Weapons and explosives and radio sets were ordered delivered to military authorities.

The vice mayor issued a proclamation on orders of the commander. It said:

"German troops upon the order of the leader of the Third Reich, Adolf Hitler, have occupied the city of Moravsa-Ostrava. The mayor and deputy mayor have been made personally responsible for every incident.

"I therefore appeal to you to preserve absolute calm and order and not to assemble in the streets, and each of you, without difference of rank or occupation, to present yourselves at your places of work tomorrow morning. Fulfill your duties conscientiously."

Followers of Gajda, some of whom wore small swastika pins, alternated cries favoring their leader with shouts of "out with the Jews!" Jews disappeared from the streets as quickly as possible.

A loudspeaker atop a building on a main Prague boulevard kept repeating: "Citizens! You must remain orderly!"

Crowds Kept Moving

Police in pairs kept crowds moving, trying to prevent Fascists and non-Fascists from coming to blows.

Officials did not know what to do in the chaotic situation caused by the creation of the Nazi puppet state in Bratislava, Slovak capital, by the advance of the Hungarian troops and by the uncertainty as to what Hitler expected of the Czechs.

The Hungarian action meant little to Prague as far as loss of territory was concerned, for that eastern section already was effectively separated from Bohemia and Moravia through the Slovak secession. But Czech troops were left stranded in Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia) and the problem of preventing clashes with Hungarians arose.

The complete end of democracy and the coming of a Fascist or semi-Fascist regime was predicted for the Prague district as a probable result of the Berlin talks.

Reports from several provincial cities said that anti-Jewish demonstrations occurred, and that business was partly paralyzed. There are about 21,000 Jews in Bohemia-Moravia.

Czech Bonds Fall Sharply

New York, March 14.—While Czecho-Slovak bonds were breaking sharply on the New York Stock Exchange today, the opinion was expressed in financial circles that Germany's demand for customs and monetary union with Bohemia-Moravia meant that the Reich has its eye on the smaller nation's gold reserve.

The Czecho-Slovak central bank has $83,000,000 of gold excluding about $11,000,000 of gold held in a special fund against gold liabilities. Beyond this gold, the national bank has around $35,000,000 of balances abroad and foreign currencies.

Of the $115,000,000 to $120,000,000 of gold and foreign exchange at the disposal of Czecho-Slovakia, some part undoubtedly represents the proceeds of the French-British loans and gifts totaling £16,000,000 ($75,200,000) to the dismembered nation.

When Germany seized Austria a year ago, the latter brought as a dowry to the union $46,000,000 of gold, according to the national bank's published statement. This gold taken from Austria never appeared in the Reichsbank's condition statement. Bankers with connections abroad say the Nazi Party took over the management of the Austrian gold, denying Dr. Hjalmar Schacht at the Reichsbank access to it. The party used the gold as it saw fit in buying materials abroad.

Bohemian-American Assails Democracies for 'Cowardice'

Deep dismay at the "cowardice" of the European democracies in pursuing a hands-off policy in the dissolution and subjection of Czecho-Slovakia was voiced last night by one of the most prominent Bohemian-Americans in this country.

Speaking only on condition that his name not be used, because of governmental connections, he took sharp issue with the democracies' passiveness to "this robbery, piracy and international crime." Shortly after the interview he was summoned to the Czecho-Slovakian Legation for a conference with Minister Hurban.

"No one seems to realize," he said, 'that what is taking place over there is a prelude to what is planned for South America, Mexico and even this country. The more you feed the tiger the more ravenous he becomes."

The countries which are hiding their heads in the sand, ostrich-like, will soon learn the folly of that practice, he asserted. Such a course is deplorable not only from a standpoint of self-preservation but because it exposes a callousness which may be compared to a crowd's looking on idly while a thug beats up a citizen, he declared.

"That which took place today was not so sudden as it seems. It was decided at Munich, yes, even before Munich. This catastrophe has come to Czecho-Slovakia because she was abandoned by the rest of the world. We are gradually being forced back to medieval conditions."

Minister Hurban, himself a Slovak, refrained from issuing any press statements yesterday. The two members of his legation staff, Counselor Karel Brejska and First Secretary Karel Cervenka, are both Czechs.

The State Department, while studying developments carefully, likewise had nothing to say publicly. At his press conference, Acting Secretary Sumner Welles threw no light on what this Government's attitude might be on the splitting up of the post-war republic.

It appeared inevitable, however, that the trade agreement negotiated last year with Czecho-Slovakia, one of the world's greatest exporters of shoes, will have to be revised.

By the Associated Press.

Problems of recognition and revision of existing treaties will confront the State Department as a result of Slovakia's declaration of independence from Czecho-Slovakia.

Officials carefully studied developments today but refrained from comment. Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, would not throw any light on the Government's attitude at his press conference.

Poles March Into Carpatho-Ukraine to Merge Border With Hungary

30 Villages Reported Held By Hungarians

Czechs Capitulate To Ultimatum From Budapest

Hungary

gary announced early today that the dissolved Czecho-Slovak government's answer to an ultimatum demanding evacuation of the eastern province was unsatisfactory.

The foreign office announced that in consequence "immediate measures will be taken."

The foreign office said the Czech answer received at 11 p. m. yesterday four hours before the ultimatum expired, refused Hungarians in Carpatho-Ukraine the right to form their own armed formations, one of Hungary's demands.

Hungary yesterday delivered a 24-hour ultimatum, expiring at 9 a. m. (3 p. m., Eastern standard time) demanding withdrawal of Czech troops. This ultimatum Czecho-Slovakia agreed to accept. The evacuation actually began yesterday evening.

Other demands of a 12-hour ultimatum were not answered satisfactorily, however.

The ultimatum had been delivered with German approval, Hungarian sources said.

The Czech reply agreed to protect Hungarian lives in Carpatho-Ukraine, another Hungarian demand, but a special announcement here asserted:

"In recent hours reports have been received that Hungarian citizens have been assailed and persecuted."

The foreign office declared:

"In consequence the Hungarian government must declare that the so-called Ruthenian (Carpatho-Ukraine) government does not desire or cannot efficiently protect Hungarian interests and therefore the Hungarian government will energetically provide for the necessary protection.

The Hungarian army moved in mass early today to the occupation of Ruthenia, where there were an estimated 10,000 Czech troops. Many classes of reservists were called to the colors during the night and the movement was still under way.

Motor cars and trucks were being requisitioned.

The foreign office said the Czech refusal to allow Hungarians in Carpatho-Ukraine to arm themselves was made at the request of the new independent government proclaimed at Chust, the capital, today by Premier Augustin Volosin.

The Hungarian troops were expected to reach Chust, capital of Carpatho-Ukraine, today.

Foreign office officials said they expected little resistance from Volosin, and they declared Hungary would "know how to deal" with him if he were "unlucky" enough to be caught.

Volosin's announcement of an independent Carpatho-Ukraine at first caused concern here, but later it was reported his "frantic" appeals to Hitler and Mussolini had gone unanswered, and it was said that alone he could do little to resist Hungary.

Rumania Seizes Villages

Special Cable to The Post.

London (Wednesday), March 15.—Rumanian troops early today occupied more than 20 villages in the eastern part of Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia), according to a Prague dispatch from Reuters (British) News Service.

The information came from Bratislava, on the Slovak-German border, the dispatch said.

Premier Augustin Volosin, who had earlier declared the independence of Carpatho-Ukraine was reported to have fled to Rumania.

Follows Like Attacks

The Rumanian invasion followed closely similar attacks on Carpatho-Ukraine, until yesterday the easternmost province of now dismembered Czecho-Slovakia, by Hungary and Poland. The area occupied by the soldiers of King Carol is inhabited largely by Rumanians.

[Rumanian political leaders took a grave view of the day's developments, fearing further extension of German penetration in the Danube basin, the United Press said.

[It was said that Rumania would not oppose a common Polish-Hungarian frontier.

[It was believed, however, that if Hungary should claim Carpatho-Ukraine and obtain a frontier with Poland she would offer to Rumania the border strip where the population is predominantly Rumanian.

[Eighty members of the Ruthenian shock troops fled into Rumania late in the day after allegedly being beaten by Czech soldiers.

[Three hundred Rumanian families, carrying personal belongings on their backs, also crossed the border and several hundred others were expected before morning. The Rumanian minority in Carpatho-Ukrainia numbers about 20,000.

[The refugees told of fierce fighting between Czech troops and Ruthenian semimilitary separatist groups.

[The Carpatho-Ukraine's first formal step—and possibly its last—toward independence came late last night when Premier Volosin named a provisional cabinet and summoned the old autonomous parliament into emergency session.

["Steps already have been taken to make Ruthenia (Carpatho-Ukrainia) independent," Volosin announced by radio.

[He summoned the Diet to meet today when the deputies will be asked to follow neighboring Slovakia in breaking away from the Czecho-Slovak republic.

[Earlier in the day, Volosin was understood to have appealed to the foreign ministers of Germany and Italy to enforce the guarantees of the Carpatho-Ukrainian border contained in the Vienna accord of last November 2.

[The Vienna accord, drawn up by the Italian and German foreign ministers, surrendered portions of Carpatho-Ukrainia and Slovakia to Hungary.—Editor's note.]

Three Nations Confer

Warsaw, March 14 (AP).—Foreign Minister Joseph Beck received the Rumanian Ambassador and the Hungarian Minister tonight as rumors spread in Warsaw that the eastern section of Carpatho-Ukraine would be occupied by Rumanians.

There are about 40,000 Rumanians living in the eastern part of Carpatho-Ukraine, once autonomous province of the Czecho-Slovak republic, which broke away today under German and Hungarian pressure.

Roosevelt Blamed

Berlin, March 14 (U.P.).—A German government official asserted tonight that President Roosevelt really was responsible for today's carving up of Czecho-Slovakia.

"The President's speeches about democracy and armaments and his criticism of the authoritarian states encouraged the Czechs to believe they could oppress the Slovaks without interference from Germany," he said. "They were mistaken and Roosevelt is to blame."

Moscow-Tokyo Showdown Seen Today

Japan to Fight to Last for Fisheries, Parliament Told

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 14.—A warning was issued in Parliament tonight that Japan would fight to the last over the valuable northern Kamchatka fishing grounds, involved in a long-standing Russian-Japanese dispute.

A showdown is expected tomorrow when Russian officials are scheduled to conduct an auction of 293 fishing lots, formerly assigned to Japanese, off the Siberian coast.

The Japanese have announced that they will not participate in the bidding, but Viscount Tadashiro Inouye told Parliament Russia was mistaken if she believed that "Japan has no intentions of fighting to the last over the northern fisheries."

(Soviet Foreign Commissar Litvinoff and Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo conferred in Moscow but failed to agree. Togo asked the Russian government to reconsider, but Litvinoff said the bidding would be conducted as scheduled.

2 Indicted as Coster Blackmailers

New York, March 14 (AP).—A Brooklyn grand jury today indicted Joseph Brandino, 61, his sister, Mary, 31, and an unnamed fugitive for alleged conspiracy to extort $50,000 from F. Donald Coster-Musica, self-slain president of McKesson & Robbins Drug Co.

Assistant Attorney General John Harlan Amen said the indictments were the first of a series in connection with alleged blackmail conspiracies directed against Coster-Musica during the years he masqueraded as a dignified financier.

War Can't Impose Peace, Flandin Warns

Ex-Premier of France Tells Liberals Not to Force Ideas on Others

By Pierre Etienne Flandin

Former Premier of France.
By Wireless to The Washington Post.

Paris, March 14.—The predictions published and uttered during the last few months are unfavorable rather than favorable for what is going to happen in the spring. Statesmen and journalists compete in their pessimism.

There is no more question of the uprising which the Germans were supposed to be organizing in the Ukraine in order to prepare for an armed intervention in Soviet Russia, nor is there any question of the presumed imminent introduction of a national socialist regime in Hungary and Rumania.

Nor, further, is there any question of transforming the Spanish civil war into a European conflict. The somber predictions of our war alarmists concerning the definite installation of Italian naval bases in the Balearic Islands, of Italian and German air bases on the Pyreannean frontier have vanished into smoke after the frank and precise declarations of Gen. Franco and the investigations undertaken in Spain by French military officials invited to note on the spot the positive absence of airports and fortifications.

The adherence of Spain to the anti-Communist pact is in itself problematic, while all the speeches of the leader of new Spain tend to place Spain outside the warring coalitions of Europe, according to her age-old traditions, once peace is established.

Even the idealogical conflicts between the totalitarian states and the democracies are gradually being apeased.

From this point of view Goebbels' last speech is most significant. The least that can be said is that the autarchical system is being considered from another angle than formerly. It would obviously be absurd to ask the Nazis to condemn a system which they have done their best to make effective and it would be still more clumsy to triumph over the relative failure of this German experiment.

The present problem seems to be the following: Are the Democratic and dictatorial governments sincerely decided to make an attempt to collaborate?

But recently the worst obstacle was of a psychological character. So long as the Spanish civil war amounted to a conflict of warring idealogies the two camps had every reason to distrust each other. It was natural that the totalitarians should fear that conversations and negotiations were a mere feint to conceal the desire of the democracies to bring about the ruin of their adversaries.

Inversely, the democracies were quite as justified in fearing that the negotiations were merely a snare set by their adversaries to establish by violence in Europe and the whole world the supremacy of the dictatorships over democracies.

It has always been my idea that moral disarmament should precede any effort of mutual understanding and collaboration. On both sides there is still much to be done in this respect. Statesmen would do well to leave this question of regime to academic discussion.

This is by no means impossible if on both sides international relations are governed by a desire for understanding to the exclusion of domination. But those responsible for the destinies of mankind should remember that to understand they must be able to put themselves in the other's place. This may be difficult. The general impoverishment of Europe after the Great War of 1914-1918, with the vision and hopes of the peoples for definite material progress, complicates the task of statesmen.

However this may be, a long economic crisis followed by serious political tension has resulted in a general depression in Europe which raised the problem of new sources of wealth as preliminary to a redistribution of those already existing.

But these new sources of enrichment can only be found in an extended and more rapid system of trade. This is the sole solution, and the fact that those who advocated general economic autarchy for the purpose are beginning to realize that this is in itself a hopeful symptom for which the best justification is the French-German agreement which has just been signed in Berlin.

Thus the way to peace will be smoother and the chances of peace will be more serious if men who boast of their good will really employ it to appease the various egotistical tendencies.

Slovaks Vote Independence, Contemplate Debt to Hitler

By the Associated Press.

Bratislava, Slovakia, March 14.—The 2,400,000 inhabitants of Slovakia, too bewildered by the swift rush of events to cheer much, today found they constituted a new republic under Germany's protection.

The Slovak Parliament in a silent, rising vote severed connection with the disintegrating, 20-year-old Czecho-Slovak republic whose end was formally decreed in Prague.

A new Slovak republic was formed and Dr. Joseph Tiso, backed by a promise of military aid from Reichsfuehrer Hitler if necessary, was made first premier.

The first reaction of Slovaks was astonishment rather than elation at the sudden success of their long-standing separatist agitation.

Yesterday they were Czecho-Slovak citizens, restive under what they termed unfair treatment as second-class citizens under the "Czech yoke."

Today they believed themselves free citizens of a new republic, even though with exacting obligations to Germany.

Tiso, ousted last week by the Prague government for countenancing separatist agitation, was the central figure in Parliament's deliberations.

He reported on his conversations last night with Hitler in Berlin in which he was promised German military aid to win independence.

That promise was enough to bring a unanimous vote for independence by the old regional Parliament which had been set up when Prague granted regional autonomy to Slovakia after the Munich agreement September 29.

Tiso and his ministers met to form the framework of the new state, which is called the Republic ow Slovakia. A close German protectorate, it probably will have a Parliament, but great authority will be lodged with the chief of state.

Close association with the Rome-Berlin axis seemed certain and there was a possibility Slovakia might join the anti-Communist agreement to which Germany, Italy, Hungary, Japan and Manchukuo have adhered.

Miaja's Council Labors Toward Genuine Peace

15 Killed, 30 Injured As Nationalist Planes Raid Valencia Suburbs

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 14.—Gen. Jose Miaja's national defense council announced tonight it was concentrating on establishment of "a permanent peace."

A communique said the council "is now experiencing long hours of labor and constant worry in an effort to bring about the most genuine wishes of the people, which are only to consolidate a permanent peace throughout the territory."

The council earlier was said to be working to facilitate flight of republicans who fear they are on a nationalist blacklist.

Fifteen persons were killed and 30 injured when five nationalist warplanes raided the Valencia suburbs of Patraix and Mislata and the village of Chirivella today.

The nationalist destroyer Velasco, accompanied by the merchantman Mar Negro, captured 210 men composing the crews of ten fishing boats who were at work off the Valencia coast. The men were put aboard the Mar Negro. The news was carried to Valencia by an eleventh fishing boat, which escaped.

German Treaty Invoked in Plea For Nazi Refugee

Pleading for Dr. Karl Grunwald, of Vienna, Austria, two lawyers yesterday urged Justice Bailey to allow the physician to travel through this country in his flight to Cuba from the threat of a Nazi concentration camp.

Attorneys Lawrence Koenigsberger of Washington and Horace G. Marks of New York told the Court that Dr. Grunwald faces imprisonment unless he gets out of reach of the German authorities. The decision is scheduled in a few days.

The lawyers invoked a treaty signed by America and Germany in 1923, which gave citizens of each country access to the courts of the other. Assistant District Attorney Underwood opposed any order to Secretary Hull by the court on the ground that courts cannot require a consul to issue a visa and that refusal of a visa is not reviewable.

Oppenheim's Agent Held on Larceny Charge

New York, March 14 (AP).—Eric S. Pinker, 47, literary agent for E. Phillips Oppenheim, mystery story writer, was arrested today after Oppenheim sent a cablegram from Monte Carlo complaining of the disappearance of $21,000 collected from publishing houses.

Assistant District Attorney Poretz said other alleged larcenies totaling $25,000 were involved.

Reich Takes Last Remnants Of Czech Nation

German

Joseph Tiso, to help the Slovaks establish their independence of Prague.

And now in Germany's eyes he was also "invited" by President Hacha of the Czechs to occupy Prague.

Following the conference with President Hacha, Hitler issued a proclamation to the German people declaring he had ordered German troops to march into Bohemia and Moravia today.

Troops to Disarm Terrorists

The proclamation said the troops would "disarm terroristic bands and the Czech forces defending them, to take under their protection the lives of all those threatened, and thereby to guarantee a basis for the introduction of fundamental regulations which will do justice to the meaning of a thousand-year-old history and the practical requirements of the German and Czech people."

Propaganda Minister Goebbels, on the radio at 6:07 a. m., announced German troops were ordered in to "'protect'" the Czechs.

The occupation meant a full end to an independent Czech foreign policy and the disarming of the Czech army which France so prodigiously aided after the World War in her "'encircling'" of Germany policy.

Although Hitler has stated that Germany had no territorial ambitions or further claims in Europe since the Munich settlement, which brought Czecho-Slovakia's Sudetenland into the Reich, the official German view was that President Hacha had appealed to the Fuehrer to establish a protectorate.

The official communique issued after the conference promised the Czechs a degree of autonomy proportionate to their "'peculiarity.'"

The communique said:

"The Fuehrer received today in Berlin in the presence of the Reich foreign minister, Joachim von Ribbentrop, the Czecho-Slovak state President, Dr. Emil Hacha, and the Czecho-Slovak foreign minister, Dr. Frantisek Chvalkovsky, at their request.

"At the meeting the serious situation resulting from the events of last week in the former Czecho-Slovak state territory was examined in complete candidness.

"The conviction was expressed by both sides that the purpose of all efforts must be the guarantee of quiet, order and peace in this part of central Europe."

"The Czecho-Slovak State President declared that he, in order to serve this purpose and in order to reach a final satisfaction, places the fate of the Czech people and land trustingly in the hands of the Fuehrer of the German Reich.

"The Fuehrer accepted this declaration and expressed his determination that he will take the Czech people under the protection of the German Reich and that he will guarantee autonomous development of its national life in accordance with its own peculiarity.

"The agreement was signed at 3:55 a. m. (9:55 p. m., Tuesday, Eastern standard time), by Chancellor Adolf Hitler, President Emil Hacha, Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Foreign Hinister Frantisek Chvalkovsky."

The white-haired Czech president looked grave and tired as he left the chancellery shortly before dawn. He declined a statement and drove back to his hotel through deserted streets.

Hitler stood on the chancellery steps to see him away.

Even before the conference German troops crossed the frontiers of the last bit of Czecho-Slovakia.

Force Crosses Danube

Without waiting for the outcome of this conference, however, it was semiofficially announced through the German news agency, D. N. B., had taken over police duties at Moravska-Ostrava, Czech iron and coal center near the Polish border.

The troops occupied the city hall there, and D. N. B. said Czech officials and police laid aside their arms with arrival of the troops.

So quickly was the occupation effected, D. N. B. said, that "Communist workmen could not carry out their plans to damage the plant."

German troops also were reported crossing the Danube at Vienna and advancing toward the Slovak border.

From late afternoon through the early hours of the night, motorized troops and transport passed through Vienna, these reports said, all moving toward the border.

Other troop movements had been reported through Leitermitz, toward Liboch on the Czech border northeast of Prague.

Hitler Is Dominant

No matter what is the outcome of immediate maneuvers over the remains of Czecho-Slovakia, Hitler has climbed nearer domination of the continent and his sway in Central Europe is supreme.

Europe's newest state, Slovakia, is clearly in his pocket. She will never be able to budge without German approval.

It was plain from the beginning that Hitler would emerge as the master of Bohemia-Moravia.

The future of the Carpatho-Ukraine still was undecided. But it was clear that the land was lost to Prague and would in all probability—directly or indirectly—come under the domination of Hitler.

Hitler already appeared to have a promise from Dr. Joseph Tiso, Slovak premier, that Slovakia would have no army of her own but would be content to let Hlinka Guards (Slovak storm troops) keep order.

A customs and monetary union with Germany seemed a certainty.

Application of Nazi anti-Semitic principles already had begun in Slovakia when Hacha still was chief of state of the Slovaks as well as of the Czechs.

There was a marked difference in the German official attitude toward Carpatho-Ukraine compared with the Nazi viewpoint before the Vienna award of last November 2 gave Hungary a part of both Slovakia and the autonomous eastern region.

Then Germany effectively opposed allotting Carpatho-Ukraine to Hungary, who wanted to annex the territory and have a common boundary with Poland.

How the Troops Moved Into Czecho-Slovakia

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

German and Hungarian troops continued to move last night into Czecho-Slovakia, further reducing the territory of the dismembered nation. While German troops occupied positions in Bohemia and Moravia, Hungarian troops moved into the Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia)

Blames Naivette of Slovak Leaders

Ignorant and incompetent leadership is leading the Slovaks to slaughter, Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of National University Law School, declared last night at Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md.

"Admitting that the Czezchs have made mistakes," he said, "it is unquestionably true that Slovaks found a new national spirit only in the Czecho-Slovak republic . . . The Prague government literally poured billions into Slovakia.

"The Slovaks may be elated now, as children sometimes are with a new toy; their awakening will be more than tragic . . . To rely on Nazi Germany to respect their nationality on the basis of self-determination is just another indication of political naivete, if of nothing worse."

Dr. Pergler a former member of the Czecho-Slovakian parliament charged the democracies with a "Pilate-like" complacency and remarked "there is now hardly anything to stop the German juggernaut."

"Munich brought not peace, but an accelerated pace of aggression," he concluded. "For a long time Europe will be faced with continued unrest and the men of Munich belong high on the roll of those who have aided in reverseing the course of human progress."

U. S. Ruthenians Voted for Czechs

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

New York, March 14.—Carpatho-Ukraine, or Ruthenia, the tiny tagend of what used to be Czecho-Slovakia, which became an independent nation today, voted itself into the Czech federal state in one of the strangest plebiscites of history. It was held in the United States.

When the map of Europe was being made over in 1919 the Ruthenians, on advice of President Wilson, cast their lot with the Czecho-Slovakian state. They urged the President to support them in a move for complete independence, but he advised against that.

A plebiscite of the 800,000 Carpatho-Ukrainians on whether they wished to join the Czech union was ordered, but when the time came to take the vote it was impossible to make the canvas because of unsettled conditions in their homeland, and a proxy plebiscite was held among the 400,000 Ruthenians living in the United States, most of them in western Pennsylvania.

Sixty-seven per cent cast their votes in favor of union with Czecho-Slovakia, but with the stipulation that Ruthenia be given the fullest measure of autonomy.

U. S. Joins Protest To Japanese

Tokyo, March 14 (AP).—The Japanese foreign office today confirmed that the United States, Great Britain and France had protested outlawing of the central Chinese government's currency in North China. The three powers charged that suppression of the currency in favor of Japanese-sponsored banknotes was discrimination against their commerce.

Somebody Owes U. S. $165,620,270; Czechs Did Once

By the Associated Press.

Slovakia's declaration of independence, coupled with Hitler's absorption of the Sudetenland last year, raised last night the question of who, if anybody, is to pay the postwar debt of $165,620,270 owed the United States by Czecho-Slovakia.

Czecho-Slovakia has not been paying since the Hoover moratorium in 1932, prior to which she had paid $20,134,092.

Transamerica May Face Criminal Suit

SEC Hints at Action As Bank Seeks Writ Against Showing Books

Criminal prosecutions may be resorted to in the stock delisting proceeding against Transamerica Corporation, Pacific Coast bank holding company of which A. P. Giannini is head, the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday informed the District Circuit Court of Appeals.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman W. Arnold and SEC counsel, in a brief filed with the court, declared the investigation incident to the stock delisting action had, from the outset, potential criminal as well as noncriminal aspects.

May Lead to Prosecution

"Information obtained," the court was told, "may yet lead to criminal prosecution."

The brief was filed in the injunction proceeding brought by the Bank of America National Trust & Savings Association, biggest of the Giannini-dominated banks, to prevent the SEC from examining its books.

Counsel for the bank contends the authority to delve into the records of a national bank is reserved to the office of Comptroller of the Currency and a limited number of other agencies specified by law, not including the commission. Even these agencies, they contend, are required to keep data obtained from the bank records confidential.

Numerous Transactions Cited

In accusing Transamerica of falsifying reports to the commission, the SEC cited a number of transactions involving Bank of America. These citations were based on information furnished by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau from the comptroller's office.

Under the argument advanced by the bank, the brief stated, the SEC would be powerless to expose frauds perpetrated by banks. In consequence, "an act designed for the protection of investors would be preverted into an instrumentality for their deception."

The result, is was declared, would be to "afford an asylum for banking brigands."

The statement regarding possible criminal prosecution resulted from an assertion by bank counsel, in referring to another case, that the stock delisting proceeding was noncriminal in character. Therefore the case referred to, which was criminal in character, would afford no clues as to the commission's authority.

Hlinka Guards Replace Czech Army in Slovakia

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

As the government of the new state of Slovakia took form, Hlinka guards (Slovak storm troops) were seen patrolling the streets in Bratislava to keep order. It was reported that Dr. Joseph Tiso, new premier, promised Hitler that the Slovak storm troops would take the place of an ordinary army even for peacetime needs of the fleet.

As originally proposed, the labor amendment to the defense bill required the Secretaries of War and Navy to determine whether bidders on all contracts let by their departments denied their employes the right to organize and bargain collectively. Such companies would be refused contracts.

After the War Department and the National Manufacturers Association strenuously protested, Barkley proposed that only companies convicted of violations of the Wagner labor relations act by a court of final jurisdiction be barred from War and Navy orders and the President could lift the ban when in the interests of national defense.

The conferees also agreed to accept the Senate amendment limiting aircraft expenditures to $300,000,000, and allowed retirement benefits to reserve officers injured while on active duty with payment by the Veterans Administration rather than the Army.

In liberalizing the profit limitation, the group raised the limit from 10 to 12 per cent and provided that net losses or net profits of less than 12 per cent can be averaged over four years.

In addition, to aid in research and experimentation, the conference committee added a section under which the first three unsuccessful bidders in a design competition will be paid 75, 60 and 50 per cent, respectively, of their development and manufacturing costs.

Japanese Report Lacking

By the Associated Press.

Japan has failed to provide the United States thus far with her annual report on her mandated Pacific islands. It is now several months overdue, without any indication it will be forthcoming.

This fact developed yesterday as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee requested further advice from the State Department as to whether Japan had violated her obligations with regard to the islands. The Senate is debating the improvement of Guam, American possession in the far Pacific.

Japan is required by the treaty of 1922 with the United States to furnish this government with a duplicate of the report she makes annually to the League of Nations mandate commission. It is thought Japan, which has severed all connections with the League, may have decided to discontinue making the report.

However, some officials here expressed belief that her departure from the League has not absolved her from her obligation to furnish the United States with this information.

Japan's last report, received in December, 1937, contained an accounting for the full year of 1936 and showed she was making extensive harbor improvements in the islands.

Baltimorean Called In Murder Trial

By the Associated Press.

Versailles, France, March 14.—A Baltimore businessman who barely escaped becoming a victim of the "Villa la Voulzie" murder-for-profit ring in 1937 was called as a transatlantic witness today in the trial of a former German convict, Eugene Weidmann.

The court decided to ask the French consul at Baltimore for statements from 67-year-old Michael Stein on an attempt to kidnap him described by Weidmann at his trial today.

In similar kidnapings Miss Jean de Koven, Brooklyn dancer, and five others were killed and robbed.

Weidmann testified an attempt was made to kidnap Stein July 14, 1937, but that he became suspicious and his captors let him go after he had been lured into an automobile.

Steins Silent

Baltimore, March 14 (AP).—Emmanuel Stein, son of Michael Stein, named in a French trial as the object of an unsuccessful kidnap plot, said the father was out of town and declined to tell where.

Sheehy Rebukes Anti-Semites, Cites Church's Jewish Heritage

"Nominal Christians" who spread anti-Semitism last night were reminded that "Catholic life flows out of the heritage of Jewish religious culture," in a radio address by Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religious education at Catholic University.

Speaking under auspices of the Council Against Intolerance in America, Dr. Sheehy rebuked Christians who have allowed themselves to become "subtle agents of anti-Jewish propaganda."

"Time and again Pope Pius XI condemned anti-Semitism," the educator recalled, quoting the Pontiff's injunction to Belgian pilgrims last September:

"No, it is not possible for Christians to take part in anti-Semitism. We are Semites spiritually."

"As a Catholic," Dr. Sheehy declared, "I salute the Jew as my spiritual ancestor, who preserved belief in one God in hard, cruel times, who worshiped and still worships the true God. We must be then both spiritually Semites and spiritually Christian—and no heart is Christian that harbors any hatred or ill-will toward anyone. That explains why from time immemorial the Popes have so frequently and fiercely condemned anti-Semitism.

"Only two days have elapsed since Pope Pius XII has taken over the chair of Peter. But I know—and the anti-Semitic leaders of Europe know—that the former secretary of state of Pope Pius XI would spare no effort to rid the world of a hatred that shakes the foundations of civilization."

Tracing the history of the papacy's attitude toward anti-Semitism, the cleric pointed out that the first Popes, like the Master they served, were themselves Jewish.

The true Christian's attitude toward his Jewish neighbors, Dr. Sheehy said, is found in the words of Pope Gregory IX, spoken 700 years ago:

"... Whenever any unjust attacks upon the Jews come under your notice, redress their injuries, and do not suffer them to be visited in the future by similar tribulations."

Senator Warren Barbour, of New Jersey, introduced the speaker.

On reaching the coast, the casket will be shipped by boat to New Orleans, and will complete the journey by rail. Mr. Brown had been engaged in construction of the Inter-American highway.

U. S. Allows Actress Cost for Growing 'Old'

The board of tax appeals ruled yesterday that Helen Menken was immune from income taxes on $8,041 she spent growing old in "The Old Maid," the Pulitzer prize play of 1935.

She said she spent the money for costumes showing her gradually increased age in the play. The board upheld her contention it was a "business expense."

Mother to Split $300,000 With Coogan

Jackie Also Gets Rights to Exploit His Old Films

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, March 14.—Jackie Coogan, who claimed he earned $4,000,000 in films, will receive only approximately $150,000 under a settlement of his accounting suit against his mother and stepfather, Arthur Bernstein, attorneys said today.

The tentative agreement lacks only signatures.

It provides that Coogan will get half of about $300,000, two-thirds of which is in real estate. Included are stocks and bonds representing $50,000 and miscellaneous property and cash of about $32,000.

In Jackie's share will be negatives and prints of the pictures in which he attained fame, and the right of exploiting them.

Jackie brought suit last April against his mother and his stepfather, who had been the Coogans' business manager, demanding an accounting.

He contended his late father had stated his intention of establishing a trust fund out of his son's immense earnings. No such fund ever was set up, he declared, and all that he received was $1,000 on his twenty-first birthday.

His mother replied that it never had been her late husband's intention or her own to give Jackie any considerable sum of money "because too much money would spoil him." She contended a minor's earnings belong wholly to his parents, and declared that much of his earnings had been spent for his support during his minority.

President Hints Tax Revision This Session

Tax

levied the original tax on undistributed profits."

Bankhead made clear he was speaking only for himself.

Discussing proposals to consolidate the corporation tax on Monday, the Senate Majority Leader said if it was confined to the large corporations it might mean an increase in this class from 19 up to 27 per cent. If the consolidated levy were applied also to small corporations, Barkley said it might mean an increase in this class from 12½ up to 17 per cent.

While the President did not name the corporation taxes proposed for repeal, the capital stock and excess profits tax have been most frequently mentioned in a plan attributed to Undersecretary of the Treasury John Hanes. Senator Harrison also has sought repeal of the undivided profits tax and further modification of the capital gains levy.

There has been some discussion at the Capitol of shifting part of the business tax burden to other sources, middle bracket incomes between $15,000 and $50,000, for example, but the President said no changes in individual income taxes has figured in White House discussions.

Aside from the business tax issue, the President pointed out that some tax legislation must be enacted this session, as the so-called nuisance levies and the percentage corporation tax are soon to expire.

Parity Payments Studied

Questioned concerning his budget message request for taxes to finance last year's $212,000,000 appropriation for farm price parity payments, he said this was another matter before Congressional committees. In approving parity payments, he said Congress had implied a promise to finance them.

Running headlong into the economy drive led by Harrison, a House agriculture sub-committee tomorrow will report a farm appropriation bill providing another $250,000,000 for parity payments, not included in the President's budget, and for which no tax provision is made.

New Land Estimate Adds $1,500,000 a Year To U. S. Share of D. C. Costs by Overton Plan who has been a leader in studying the fiscal problems of the District since 1915, and Surveyor Dent.

Hearings will be resumed at 10 a. m. tomorrow, when Commissioner Hazen and a long list of representatives from the Federation of Citizens Associations will be heard.

Commissioner Hazen has asked that the plan be written into the new District tax law, Senator Overton and witnesses yesterday agreed that the formula should be accepted or rejected before the tax law—now under consideration in a House District subcommittee—is finally agreed upon.

Senator D. Worth Clark, new member of the Overton subcommittee interrupted yesterday's hearing frequently to express surprise at the score of Federal services in the District financed entirely by local funds.

Maj. Donovan listed 20 of these services—among them school and library facilities for non-resident children, water for Federal buildings, construction and maintenance of streets in Federally occupied areas, maintenance of parks and police. He said $11,150,000 worth of services were rendered to the Government by the District in 1938, during which year the Federal payment to the District was $5,700,000.

Maj. Donovan stressed, however, that "District figures absolutely cannot be compared to figures in any other city in the United States," and often are misleading to persons unfamiliar with the local government structure.

"A total of $6,500,000 in the District budget would appear in the State rather than municipal budgets of other cities," he said. "Just as government costs cannont be compared, neither can the tax burden."

"Whatever the arrangement between the two governments is to be," Maj. Donovan declared. "It ought to be put into something resembling permanent form. Our whole tax structure and our planning for the future demand it."

Colladay indorsed the Overton plan as "I think the best and simplest method available at this time as a solution to the troublesome fiscal problem."

"I have presented arguments before Congress to show that the Federal Government should pay more than this formula proposes and I have heard Congressmen present arguments why it should pay less. I think the Overton plan is the fairest and most accurate one yet presented," he declared.

Speaking for the Board of Trade, Fleming said: "We believe Senator Overton's bill sets up a reasonably simple formula for the division of expenses based on land usage. Previous reports have demonstrated the utter futility of attempting to evaluate the manifold services given by one government to the other and to base the financial relationship upon the value of those services . . .

"We believe that the simplicity of it, its fairness and the fact that it clearly recognizes and reestablishes a true partnership basis between the people of the United States and residents of the District of Columbia all commend its adoption."

House Group Eyes Army Ban On D. Cupid

Discovers Plan to Keep Young Officers From Marrying for 3 Years

Congressmen came to the aid of Dan Cupid yesterday, and threatened to block the best laid plans of the Army's grim generals.

Members of the House Military Affairs Committee, considering a bill to make all commissions in the Army revokable for the first three years, discovered that the War Department high command intended under it to bar lieutenants from marrying in their probationary period. While Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, and other committeemen approved, more romantic-minded legislators blocked the move, at least temporarily.

The Army's plan has been kept quiet, but the service grape-vine being what it is, Senators and Representatives of late have been receiving protests from back home, principally from the brides-to-be of this year's West Point graduating class.

With plans already made for June weddings, they were frantic lest the cold-hearted War Department play the stern parent role.

More hard-boiled than the House group, the Senate Military Affairs Committee has approved the marriage ban, it was revealed yesterday, but only on the promise of Army officials that it would not be applied to this June's graduating class of others commissioned during 1939. In the formal language of a committee report, Senator Hill (Democrat), Alabama, told the Senate that the exemption "is designed to avoid any embarrassment . . . to those . . . who may have already made commitments with respect to marriage."

"The committee," Senator Hill continued, "believe that young men commissioned in the Army and during the first three years of their service should be entirely free from comestic obligations which interfere with the full and complete devotion of their entire time and energy to perfecting themselves in their new profession."

House committeemen sympathetic to D. Cupid prevented immediate approval yesterday but less-romantic colleagues forced its consideration by a sub-committee, which the former fear may be stacked against them.

Senators Walsh and King Back District Alley Slum Clearance

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, and Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, yesterday came to the defense of the Alley Dwelling Authority, but made no effort to restore the $500,000 Treasury loan to the Treasury-Postoffice supply bill.

An effort to retain the loan appropriation, which is half of the amount recommended by the Budget Bureau, will be made in Senate-House conferences on the bill, however.

Senator Walsh said the ADA "expenditure of money for housing is the only Government activity of which I know that is doing away with slums and at the same time is not providing subsidies for the tenant to occupy the houses constructed by the Authority.

"Personally, I have felt that it was a very healthy situation, in view of our large expenditures for housing, in connection with the which subsidies are to be paid for 60 years, to have this experiment carried on here in the District of Columbia," he added.

Questioned by Walsh as to why the $500,000 Treasury loan appropriation was eliminated by the Senate Appropriations Committee, Senator Glass, the chairman, said:

"The reason was that the committee regarded the activities of this agency as purely speculative."

Senator King corrected a statement by McKellar that the ADA has expended several millions of dollars already on slum clearance. He also placed in the record a review of the activities of the ADA to date.

Cancer Funds Saved

A fight on the floor by Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, yesterday saved, temporarily at least, a $260,000 cut in the 1940 appropriation for the National Cancer Institute.

The Senate passed the $1,701,189.11 Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill, which includes the $700,000 cancer fund, and also accepted a House proposal for $5,000,000 for the social disease division of the Public Health Service.

Senator Bone reminded the Senate that in 1937 it passed the cancer bill unanimously because of its knowledge that the disease is costing 150,000 lives yearly. He pointed out that the act creating the institute authorized $700,000 for its operation.

Senate Repasses Bill to Alter Civil Service Retirement Act

Neely Measure, Killed in House By Previous Session, Provides Reduction in Ages for Several Classes

The Senate yesterday, for the second time, passed the Neely bill to amend the civil service retirement act. Action was unanimous after Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, had explained the legislation.

The bill, which died in the House last session after being approved by the Senate, provides in brief:

For the reduction of retirement ages for the several classes from 68, 63 and 60 years to 64, 60 and 56.

Three 1-year extensions of appointments beyond the retirement age when desired by the employe and approval by the Civil Service Commission.

That the employes' contribution to the retirement fund shall be increased from 3½ to 4 per cent; permits employes to deposit additional amounts of between 1 and 10 per cent for the purchase of additional annuities.

That disabled employes may be kept on retirement rolls for 12 months after complete recovery instead of 90 days as at present.

Out Of Confusion

Dr. Albert Einstein's announcement that he has discovered a new unifying mathematical concept of the universe is news which science has eagerly awaited for many a year. With such a theory, checked and sustained by experimentation, men of science might be able to restore an element of stability and understanding to this confusing world. More and more that is coming to be the major aim of scientists who retain a broad humanitarian vision.

In the pre-scientific era our systems of morals and ethics were closely tied to basic concepts of life and the nature of the universe which had stood for centuries. When modern research undermined those foundations, confusion and a breakdown of standards was inevitable. At first this disintegration seemed to delight the hearts of scientists. But in recent years they have come to realize the perils which confront an age intellectually and spiritually cut adrift from the standards of its forebears.

The countermovement is now going forward on two fronts. Einstein is the spearhead of the intellectual endeavor to obtain a comprehensive understanding of the physical world. Meanwhile scientists from numerous fields are trying to turn the achievements of research and invention to socially useful and humanitarian ends.

How far the new Einstein theory will go in explaining the new "basic secret of the universe" is still open to question. His brilliant work in unifying space and time under one general concept gives great promise to this new endeavor which he has pursued for 20 years. The renowned mathematician believes that he has now found the universal law governing the atom as well as the universe. As he points out, his theory must still be "checked with experimental facts." If it stands the rigid tests to which scientists all over the world will eagerly subject it, it may easily prove to be the greatest discovery of this century.

The question then arises as to what effect such a discovery may have upon the future philosophy and behavior of the human race if it survives the test of time. Human beings react to emotional and spiritual stimuli even more emphatically than to knowledge and scientific understanding. And most of the world's gravest problems of today seem to be intimately related to emotional impulses and psychological attitudes. Can science lay down a background of truth and understanding of life sufficiently powerful to guide the intuitive forces within us?

While that question must at present remain unanswered, it is to the everlasting credit of our great mathematicians, physicists, cosmologists and social science experts that they are doing their utmost to bring a greater degree of understanding and unity of purpose into this confused world.

The Debt Limit

The Administration's decision not to press Congress at this session for an increase in the statutory debt limit testifies to the growing strength of the economy movement.

It does not, however, necessarily imply a victory for the advocates of economy. As Secretary Morgenthau notes, the only way to economize is to cut appropriations. So unless Congress is prepared to wield the pruning knife, it is simply following the practice of the proverbial ostrich in refusing to face the inevitability of an eventual increase.

With a margin of about $5,000,000,000 of unutilized borrowing capacity to tide it over the coming months, the Treasury will not be seriously embarrassed by its decision not to seek authorization to borrow above the present maximum of $45,000,000,000. In the meantime, perhaps, Congress may address itself seriously to the task of bringing expenditures more nearly into balance with income, thereby offering some assurance that the debt limit will not continue to advance indefinitely.

No considerations of economy stand in the way of removing the limitation imposed upon the amount of outstanding bonds, as contrasted with note and bill issues, provided the total of all obligations remains within the existing debt limit. And it is most desirable to convert a large part of the medium and short-term debt into long-term bonds. The Treasury has been making rapid progress along that line under very propitious conditions. At the present time the demand for Government bonds is exceptionally strong, both in case of large institutional and small individual investors, who are increasingly disposed to buy the so-called baby bonds.

Refunding operations and continuance of sales of baby bonds at the present rate will soon bring outstanding bond issues up to the statutory maximum of $30,000,000,000. In fact Secretary Morgenthau asserts that unless the law is changed the Treasury will not be able to issue any more bonds after September 30. That would be most unfortunate, for it would mean placing exclusive reliance upon note and bill issues, thereby adding to the volume of short-term debt which the Treasury has been trying to bring within more manageable compass.

An Issue Of Policy

Congress has now before it President Roosevelt's second request for an additional relief appropriation of $150,000,000, to supplement the supplementary appropriation of $725,000,000 approved on February 4. The $150,000,000 requested now is the same amount as was asked in the special message of February 7. It is identical with the amount by which Congress pruned the first supplementary appropriation, requested by the President on January 5.

So Mr. Roosevelt stands pat in demanding that Congress shall make no attempt to cut his estimates. Under the circumstances, it seems meaningless for him to challenge advocates of economy to specify the expenditures to be cut and the extent of the saving. For an attempt by Congress to do just this has now produced two special messages protesting the very procedure to which the White House gives theoretical indorsement.

The situation is the more confusing because it is impossible to say whether this additional $150,000,000 is actually needed for the prevention of suffering, or whether the real motive behind it is the Eccles theory of promoting recovery by unrestricted spending. In his message yesterday Mr. Roosevelt intimated that at least a part of his concern is for the spending program. "I cannot bring myself to believe," he said, that curtailment of the WPA pay roll "will contribute to the prosperity of the United States."

There are many, on the other hand, who cannot bring themselves to believe that there is any lasting contribution to prosperity in the program of work relief. For years now this has been piling up enormous deficits without providing any offsetting stimulus to the basic industries in which the problem of unemployment really centers.

It is, therefore, apparent that the fundamental problem for Congress is to decide whether it wants spending for the sake of spending, as Mr. Eccles deems important, or whether it wants the program of economy, of definite approach to budget balance, which Mr. Roosevelt seems to favor in principle but to oppose in practice. If economy is in order, that organization is certainly a logical place to start. But if continued deficit financing is the desirable course, then there is no point in saving here, or elsewhere.

There is some reason to believe that the Administration is more opposed to economy than concerned with the plight of the unemployed as such. Although nearly six weeks have passed since Congress instructed the WPA to retrench, this administrative agency has offered no program to achieve that end. The country is assured that "all possible economies in administration and operation are being sought," but there is little concrete evidence to bear out the claim. There are, on the other hand, such developments as the allocation of $250,000 from relief funds to build a WPA propaganda exhibit at the World's Fair in New York.

So far the WPA has never been forced to economize. On the contrary it has throughout been encouraged to waste money on the comforting assumption that its squandering somehow contributes to economic recovery. For this the WPA itself is not to blame. Any agency fostered in spendthrift psychology will, if left to itself, continue to operate along spendthrift lines. That, as Mr. Roosevelt would say, is "a condition and not a theory."

To the President the condition—the enormous appropriations almost continuously needed by the WPA to sustain its present scale of spending—is at the moment the important factor. That aspect of the situation he has amply emphasized. For Congress remains the duty of ascertaining the theory behind the condition.

Is it, or is it not, believed that the unrestrained pouring of billions into work relief will somehow, sometime, work back to stimulate the basic industries where unemployment concentrates? Mr. Roosevelt's statement yesterday that 86 per cent of all WPA expenditures goes into wages; that only 10.5 per cent is used for supplies, indicates that the economic stimulus of this expenditure is small.

The evidence is that the WPA is wasteful; that it encourages political abuses; that it fails to stimulate employment and cannot care for more than a fraction of the unemployed. By process of elimination it appears that the one unquestionable asset of the organization is its ability to spend huge sums with great celerity and ease. If that is what is wanted by Congress, then the second supplemental appropriation now demanded from it is, of course, in order.

A German Colony

Perhaps to the surprise, but certainly not to the disadvantage of Germany, the past few days have brought to a culmination the disintegrating forces in Czecho-Slovakia which were released by the Pact of Munich.

Beyond the loss of territory that four-power arrangement fatally undermined the cohesion which for 20 years had kept together the disparate elements of the war-born republic. Theoretically the Czechs and Slovaks should have been able to rebuild a stable state on the ruins of the old. The Prague government made a heroic effort to do just that. But it was hampered at every turn by external forces which intensified the disruptive factors working from within.

Now the truncated republic has been broken into fragments. Slovakia has declared an independence which is presumably to be guaranteed by Germany. Remote and primitive Ruthenia, divided from the Czech region by Slovakia, is the scene of a Hungarian invasion which, unless Germany intervenes, may end the brief autonomy of that strategically important province. And the Bohemian-Moravian rump has no choice but, at Germany's bidding, to become, even as Slovakia, a satrapy of the Third Reich.

Until this dissolving picture comes to some point of rest it will be difficult to foresee the new shape of things to come in the Czech and Slovak regions. But it is clear that the independence so proudly proclaimed by Premier Tiso, on his return to Bratislava from Berlin, can never be anything more than a shadow of the reality. If the Czech "yoke" has been cast off it does not follow that Slovakia will henceforth be out of bondage.

As created by the Treaty of Versailles, Czecho-Slovakia had a stable economy, with the agriculture of Slovakia and Moravia nicely balancing highly-industrialized Bohemia. Nor was that balance unduly upset by the Munich partition. But separated from its former markets, agrarian Slovakia has no alternative except to gravitate toward an important industrial neighbor, which now means Germany.

It is necessary, therefore, to rule out as a possibility the maintenance by Slovakia of any real degree of independence. But what other alternatives are there?

Outright union with Germany is scarcely possible unless the Czech regions are also annexed. And such a development would confront Germany's racial purists with several million Slav subjects while adding problems to the Reich's already grave economic difficulties.

A German-Slovak customs union would be more feasible, but such a solution would inevitably involve a German-Czech customs union as well. Weakened by further partition to the point where even a very limited degree of independence is impossible, the separate fragments of Czecho-Slovakia might, in a manner of speaking, be reunited as beasts of burden for the German military machine. As Hitler suggested in "Mein Kampf," Germany is building up a colonial area in Europe itself. The first of these colonies promises to be Slovakia.

Another thing that fools the Government is that the small minority that wants something makes so much more noise than the large majority that thinks they shouldn't have it.

Dorothy Dix says a wife should call her husband "oo most boofulest mans" once in a while. We can't imagine why Dot thinks a wife should cause her husband to think she's going stark crazy.

"Breathing pure oxygen will cure seasickness," declares a physician. But in ever so many instances, a seasick person is too busy to breathe pure oxygen.

Many a man has worried himself into an early grave because his physician told him the worst thing he could do is to worry.

Strive always to be fair, and remember that those who don't think as you do have a perfect right to their foolish and illogical opinions.

"All men are alike," asserts a woman columnist. Yes, and aren't you women glad of it!

Merry Millinery

From the Brooklyn Eagle

Local milliners returning from the fashion openings in Paris report that women's hats will be shorn of all gewgaws in the new styles for spring. That's a blow. It's going to rob us of a lot of enjoyment at a time when we need all we can find.

We have known despondent persons to perk up for a whole day at sight of a few samples of what we might call the inverted-coal-scuttle type of hat. At least one case has come to our attention of a life being saved by one of those hats resembling a buckwheat cake that's been on a binge. The poor fellow was about to do a Brodie off Manhattan Bridge when this hat passed him and he got to laughing so hard he forgot what he had set out to do.

If the millinery is going conservative again, the women ought to make up for it in some other part of their apparel. The world needs laughter.

Indifference to the Flag

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Living in a Nation populated by a people who are greatly envied for their liberties, we refuse to sit idly by and watch a public demonstration of neglect and unpatriotism.

We would like to nominate for the Distinguished Service Cross that person who inaugurated the idea of headlining the movies with Old Glory, costarred with "The Star-Spangled Banner."

While attending a movie the other evening we noticed several people, unwantingly and with apparent disgust, finally agreeing to arise as the flag was produced on the screen. As is customary, the words of our beloved national anthem are included in the picture for the purpose of having the audience sing. We heard none whatsoever. At the close of the feature presentation, which had as its background one of our service academies, the final scene was one of realistic beauty. Old Glory was to be seen flying gallantly from the heights of West Point. One lone patron valiantly started to applaud, but stilled his hands abruptly as if caught in the act of some crime.

Our indignation becomes uncontrollable at the repeated sight of outright indifference to this flag, which represents a land of tolerance and freedom. If the practice of "disinterested spectator" prevails, the example that we are setting for our children will eventually dissuade them from recognizing in any way whatsoever, this emblem that symbolizes a really great democracy. If this occurs, there will be no place in the annals of history for that beautiful phrase, "Oh say does that Star-Spangled Banner yet wave, o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

The Gallinger Compromise

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial entitled "Gallinger Compromise" is in my judgement a well-balanced writing and defines the issue in language that any reader can understand. I have followed Dr. George C. Ruhland since his arrival in Washington and I believe that he is trying to improve the service at Gallinger Hospital and that he has solved a vexatious problem.

The medical schools need Gallinger and Gallinger needs the help from the medical schools under such safeguards against error that will secure public confidence. Dr. Ruhland wants this and nothing more.

Our Music Features

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to express my appreciation of certain articles which I notice are appearing in The Post. Mr. Gottlieb, whether he be professional musician or simply a citizen who knows his records, is contributing a long-felt need to the general public. As a professional musician myself, I know the accuracy of his comments on the music business and the situation to which he refers from time to time. For the first time in a newspaper, especially in Washington, a musician may enjoy an article on music as much as a nonprofessional. Mr. Gottlieb's writing has one of the finest balances between the general public's interest and that of the professional musician which has been gained yet. I hope he continues with the good work.

A Typographical Error

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You were good enough to print under date of March 10 my letter concerning the Federal Trade Commission's pronunciamento against monopoly and the socialization of industry. Unfortunately through one of those slip-ups which sometimes occur, the dropping out of one letter, the non-egotistical "i," a meaning was given to a portion of what I wrote quite different from what was intended. I had referred to the FTC as "intent upon deifying so-called free enterprise." When it appeared in print, I found myself credited with having charged them with "defying so-called free enterprise." I blush when I think what my friends may think of my powers of analysis.

Remember Haym Salomon

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At this time I wish to offer my bit to promote tolerance and co-operation of races and religions in our country. I speak as a Lutheran.

Let us remember that great American patriot of early days, the noble Jew, Haym Salomon, without whom we might not have this United States of America; who three times beggared himself to pay Washington's soldiers and finance the beginnings of our Government, and who never asked, or received, payment from the Continental Congress.

We, who owe him such a debt, can now in some measure repay him in this hour of trial for this race.

May Congress make a financial contribution to the settlement of the refugee problem, as a tribute to Haym Salomon. Why are we letting England surpass us in humanity to these victims of Germany? England is not more prosperous than we. What if it does seem to us that we are a little hard up? We talk a lot about other nations owing debts to us, although they all have welfare problems. Let us now pay our debt to Haym Salomon.

We can find place for considerably more of these refugees, than whom no race has a greater right. Their industrious and self-reliant individuals add to the well-being of any community.

Let Congress, at least, pass speedily Senator Wagner's bill to permit children to enter.

What Is Pagan?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Man worship is an old-time pagan practice which even now beguiles the unthinking. Christianity and an open Bible have done much to overcome this practice. But even in this day of enlightenment the practice continues in one form or another, and there are those who, desiring to appear pious, still indulge in this heathen practice.

An enlightened and discerning world will not, however, turn back from the path of progress and enlightenment, and even the more gullible are beginning to distinguish between the true and the false in the teaching of religion.

In enlightened nations popular education has done much to dispel paganistic practices in the name of Christ and Christianity. A widespread reading of the Bible has enabled men to discover for themselves the true source of the Christian faith. Despite all obstacles, the world is moving on to higher ideals and with a clearer conception of God and humanity.

"Our Own Dirty Necks"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why don't Dorothy Thompson and Westbrook Pegler give the dictators a rest and help us wash our own dirty necks? Why don't they say something about our 10,000,000 unemployed, our crime record, our overflowing penitentiaries, jails and reformatories?

We read such as this in the daily press: "One hundred prisoners in Sing Sing sleep in the corridors on account of lack of cell room." "The District of Columbia needs a new, larger and better jail." "States Hostile to Transients." Some States are setting up "frontiers" to keep the poor and indigent out. To name some of them: California, Nevada, Arizona and Florida. I haven't read anything about such happenings in Germany or Russia. Have you, Mr. Pegler and Miss Thompson?

Spain And The Jews

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Officials of the National Conference of Christians and Jews asked me to prepare the following analysis which, unless I am mistaken, may be considered in connection with The Post editorial (March 11, 1939) apropos of a speech by Gen. Wilhelm Faupel, former Ambassador of Germany to Nationalist Spain.

"Numerous commentators have overlooked the fact that the deposed Falange official, Gimenez Caballero, who boasted of his anti-Semitism and attempted to lead a movement similar to that of Hitler in Germany, was soon arrested, tried and sentenced to jail. Senor Caballero is a totally discredited would-be Nazi, whose fate is an object lesson and warning to any other potential 'little Hitlers' in Spain who might be tempted to worship false gods.

"Cardinal Goma also told me that when Gen. Faupel, former German envoy to Nationalist Spain, allowed his headquarters to become an incipient center of National Socialist propaganda, there were immediate protests on the part of Catholic Church authorities. This prompt action led to the withdrawal of the offending ambassador.

"As an active worker for the National Conference of Christians and Jews since its organization, I believe in complete religious liberty for Jews and Christians in Spain as well as in the United States. An understanding of the Catholic position on Spain would do much to combat bigotry in this country."

On the basis of extensive, first-hand information, Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of the Catholic University of America, reported in an interview in The Post that the 100,000,000 Catholics of South America entertained exactly the same views on the Spanish issue that were held widely in the United States. This indicates that friendship with the people of Latin America may properly be one of many motives that call for early recognition of the sole stable, orderly, peaceful government of Spain.

According to The Post itself and in the light of the news now published in every newspaper of the United States, it has become clear that the only "rebels" are the Communistic elements in leftist Spain.

"Saving Peace"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sir Samuel Hoare says that five men can now save the world from suicide in preventing war.

Now is the time to recall that back in 1860 John Jordan Crittenden and Horace Greeley and others following Henry Clay made a brave attempt to prevent the holocaust that Lincoln precipitated in his war on the South. The problem then was easy.

But the great tragedy of that grand and glorious war is that the men who started it now have splendid monuments, costing millions, to commemorate their "idealism." They proved that it is a noble thing to conquer a people who don't see things as you do. They founded a new America, dedicated to a great principle. The marks they made on America will be here for another hundred years, and the great principle has produced some remarkable results, which are Mr. Roosevelt's problem.

"Scrub One!"

BY ST. PATRICK'S DAY the smell of spring was always strong in the New England air. Small boys spun their tops on sidewalks that were still gritty from repeated winter sandings. On the hillsides, the melting snow sent water pouring down the gutters and hip-booted kids splashed about happily, building mud dams, sailing tiny boats in the current. The world seemed to be alive once more, a Rip Van Winkle of a world just awaking from a long sleep.

For some reason, it seemed always to be on St. Patrick's Day that we played baseball for the first time of the season. My gang used to get together without prearrangement. But unfailingly, acting on a sort of instinct, we always had our ball gloves and a bat or two when the time came to play ball. All of us had the same idea at once.

We used to meet then in a big garden behind the house. The garden sloped gently and so part of it would be clear by snow by mid-March. A big pond always formed at the bottom of the slope, though, and behind it were deep-piled snowbanks, come there from the barn roof and shaded by its wall.

So the garden was not an ideal playing field. The ground sloped, as I have said and was studded with corn stubble. Later on, when planting time came, we would not be able to play there at all.

But it was fine, just the same, to sit on the garden wall and see bare ground where only a day or so earlier there had been nothing but snow and slush. It was fine to feel the soft earth beneath feet that seemed light without the rubbers that we had worn all winter.

The first two fellows in the garden used to toss a ball idly back and forth and wonder how long it would be before the rest of the gang showed up. There was never any talk then about teams or about the condition that our arms were in. We just wanted to have some fun, that was all.

After a while someone else would drop by, swinging a ball bat nonchalantly. We would see him coming and shout out, "Bon joor," and he would answer, "Bon apray-midi, messoors." We were all taking French in first-year high.

Then we would discuss St. Patrick's Day and the value of wearing a green tie. I always wore a green ribbon, myself, but that was because I was Irish and thus entitled to do so. Then we would toss the ball around again, waiting for a fourth to appear. You couldn't have any kind of a game without four, except three o' cat, and that wasn't much fun.

We all pretended not to do so, but we all kept on the alert for the fourth. Each of us wanted to see him first and each of us wanted to see him before he saw us. That was important because the first to be aware that there were four gathered together would holler, "Scrub one!" And whoever hollered that first had the first raps of the season.

After "Scrub one" was sounded. There was yelled "Scrub two" as fast as you could. There was generally some argument about who got Scrub two and Scrub three and so the boy with the slowest reactions or the least force of character generally ended with Scrub four, which meant that he had the last turn at bat.

I know that there are countless variations of this elementary kind of baseball. We played in this fashion: There were a catcher, a pitcher, a first baseman and a batter. The batter's object was to get to first base without being put out. If he succeeded, the baseman came to bat; if he failed, he became pitcher, the pitcher moved up to the catching position and the catcher went to bat. The baseman stayed where he was and was supposed to be honest about the whole thing.

So that was the way that we passed the first few days of the spring weather. It was fun, watching the snow banks wither and the pond dry up and feeling the smell of damp earth gradually disappear. The pond was an effective natural hazard and I guess I'll never forget the day when my best friend, running after a fly ball, plunged headlong into the icy water and mud. That was the high point of that season.

There were other things to think of after that—the first day of trout fishing was one of them. That was always an occasion made more memorable by the necessity of preparation. You had to get your tackle in order and you would window-shop for days, wondering what it would be like to have a fly-rod and to fish with a fly. Then the day before the season opened you dug worms.

There was a thrill to that, all right, and there was a thrill when you cast your line into a stream swollen and cold from the late-melting mountain snows. And if you came back with a good trout or two—well, that was a tangible reward for endeavor.

But of all the indications that spring was at hand and that an indolent summer was not far ahead I think I liked best the sudden cry, "Scrub one!"

Those Lofty Writers

WITHDRAWING nothing of what I recently said about the vanity of singers, I may add that writers, as a class and always saving the exceptions, have the same faults and a few others besides.

There is something about fame or mere publicity—which is momentary fame—which often has an upsetting effect on the poise, morals and modesty of people who work in words. Saving the exceptions again, writers think they are not bound by conventional politeness of manners and speech. Some of them come to think that they are very superior to businessmen, whom they lump together as damned grocers, and affect a lofty manner toward better persons who are not in the writing business. Some of them, women writers included, think that because they are writers they should be permitted to use dirty language in any company. This takes a conscious effect at first, because writing is seldom a family trade and most writers come from ordinary families of businessmen or employes and were fetched up in the conventional way.

Spoiled Writers Like To 'Be Different'

LITERARY AGENTS and magazine editors could tell you a lot about the inconsiderateness and irresponsibility of writers, because they are always having to hold their hands, clean up their bills and alimony problems and take them to living money between stories and often have to step in and settle family rows or arrange divorces.

A spoiled writer sitting somewhere quietly with a friend in the business, exchanging flattery, will be quite natural, but let a third person, a stranger, enter the picture and you will see him go into his dance, putting on the glamour or temperament to show that he is different and a little bit mad.

Some writers can do the tenderest and loveliest pieces imaginable about deep, honest love but can't stay hitched to one wife or husband long enough to last out a short-term sublease on an apartment, and their marriages in many cases break up for very petty causes. Some promote publicity for their stuff by adopting peculiar domestic understandings, and it is a fact, noted with sharp disappointment by persons outside the writing business, that some owners of well-known literary names who can write the most fascinating copy are the most dreadful bores in person.

Dote On Publicity, Public Adulation

WRITERS CULTIVATE hangouts in restaurants and saloons not only for the purpose of getting together and talking shop but also to be gazed at by the tourist trade and—sometimes—asked for their autographs. They have done this in Paris, London and New York, and there never was a time in New York when literary celebrity was so widespread or the celebrities so conspicuous in the night life. Saloonkeepers like to have them around to draw sightseers.

Most writers are former newspaper reporters and should have a pretty level sense of the true worth of publicity, which is made by running sheets of paper over inked cylinders and generally doesn't mean a thing, but it doesn't work out that way. It gets them just as it gets singers, actors and some types of politicians, and you will find them chucking their weight around public dinners and public joints, orating to college students and clubs and even taking bows in the subway.

Magazine Authors Get Big Build-Up

A WRITER whose stories get into the magazines is rated a celebrity, regardless of what the stories are about or how good they are, and the papers themselves used to build up this illusion of distinction by hiring old grads of the city room to cover such events as political conventions or World's Series games and billing them on the wagons as "famous magazine writer." The regular hands would do the journeyman copy, and the seal would write what the event meant to posterity or something like that for a check equal to six months' pay for a city side man.

That isn't done any more. The regular newspaper people give better coverage, and the only outstanding job of this kind by a name-writer in recent years was Edna Ferber's story about the Park avenue saloon society dolls at the Hauptmann trial. That one drew blood, but Edna Ferber is a writing writer and you never see her around.

I guess old George Bernard Shaw has done more posturing and grimacing than any other contemporary writer, but not in a scandalous or dirty way, and, anyway, the old boy is there. He has a right to act funny, but others who are always breaking into print with a disorder or monkey business or being eccentric are just being coarse for fear they will not be noticed.

President Roosevelt's Relief Message

Text of the President's message on relief to the Congress yesterday:

To the Congress of the United States:

At the opening of this session I advised the Congress of the number of needy unemployed persons who were able to perform useful work. The estimates, based on actual and estimated figures, showed that in the judgment of the executive branch of the Government 3,000,000 persons should continue to be employed during the winter months, followed by a reduction to 2,700,000 persons during the latter part of the five months' period ending on June 30, 1939. The amount of money required to supply these needs was estimated at $875,000,000.

Early in February the Congress appropriated $725,000,000, with directions that the number of persons on the relief rolls should not be decreased in number more than 5 per cent during February and March, and, in effect, requesting me to recheck the new situation thus created and advise the Congress of the results.

On February 7, I reported to the Congress that the reduction in the appropriation in itself created an emergency; that the number of persons on the relief rolls and on the "waiting list" had not decreased in number since early January; that as a result the need of these people was as great as before; that by continuing their employment during February and March half of the entire appropriation would be expended, leaving only the other half of the appropriation for the maintenance of relief during April, May and June; that the amount of money remaining after April 1 would make it necessary to discharge, between that date and June 30, nearly half of the number on relief; that this, in my judgment, would constitute a definite hardship; and that I was advising the Congress of this fact in order to give sufficient time to study the conditions which would result from the curtailment of funds.

Layoffs Start Soon

April 1 is approaching; and in pursuance of the spirit of the request for further information, I feel impelled again to call the attention of the Congress to the very serious situation which exists. Within about three weeks the reduction of Works Progress Administration employment must begin, in order that the remainder of the appropriation may be apportioned over the months of April, May and June, unless more money is appropriated quickly.

Since my messages of January and February, a careful check-up shows that there has been no substantial change in the conditions of unemployment. On the contrary, recent data have become available substantiating the real need for an additional appropriation of $150,000,000.

Partly because of seasonal conditions, the volume of employment has decreased since the end of December. This includes industrial and agricultural employment. Therefore the need for unemployment relief has increased.

Due to the seasonal factors, Works Progress Administration employment was maintained in February at an average of 2,996,000 persons, and the average for March is being held at approximately the same figure.

Despite this fact the number of persons now certified as being in need and eligible for employment is actually higher than it was a month ago. This so-called "waiting list" actually does not reflect the total needs, because in certain States certifications of eligibility are not given to the Federal authorities by the local public relief agencies until actual vacancies exist to which needy persons can be assigned.

Improvement Expected

It is my belief that improvement in business conditions between now and June will result in substantial increase in employment. However, based on the experience of the past, it cannot be expected that this increase will absorb more than 300,000 of those who are now in the Works Progress Administration rolls or who have been certified as in need and awaiting assignment.

That means that the present total of these two categories, 3,850,000 persons, would be reduced to 3,550,000.

In accordance with the requirements of the recent appropriation law, approximately 30,000 aliens have been removed from the rolls. The current investigation of the actual need of relief employes will shortly be completed in the field, but it is already clear from preliminary reports that the number who will be eliminated will not exceed 5 per cent of the total and may be considerably less.

All possible economies in administration and operation are being sought and will be constantly checked, but here again the cold facts, which have been given insufficient emphasis, require restatement.

Our of every $100 of Federal funds expended by the Works Progress Administration only $3.50 is for administrative overhead; $10.50 is spent for materials, equipment and supplies; $86 is paid out directly in the form of wages. As a business proposition it occurs to me that some modicum of commendation is in order.

Extent of Cuts Cited

If no additional appropriation is made, the Works Progress Administration must of necessity issue instructions within the next week to reduce the number of employed. The plan proposed by the administrator is to effect a reduction of approximately 400,000 in the first week in April, and a further reduction of 600,000 in the first week in May. This will reduce the total employment to 2,000,000 persons.

However, even these drastic cuts will not be sufficient to make the available fund last through to June 30 and still comply with the requirements of the statutes. Therefore, a still further reduction of more than 200,000 will have to be made early in June.

This plan has been recommended as being preferable to a program of week-to-week reductions because, under the latter, more persons would eventually lose their jobs.

Under the proposed plan the number of persons who will be thrown out of employment in the near future is 1,000,000—growing to over 1,200,000 before June 30. The number of persons, including dependents, affected by this reduction will be 4,000,000 within the next few weeks and nearly 1,000,000 more later on.

To these must be added the "waiting list" category—because it is obvious that while people now on the rolls are being discharged no people can be employed from the "waiting list."

I am of the opinion that States, counties and municipalities are doing, in the overwhelming majority of cases, all that their finances will permit to meet the situation.

In Actual Need

I further believe that, with few exceptions, those who are employed are actually in need and are not receiving more than they should in the form of Federal assistance.

It is the obvious duty of the Chief Executive to point out the need which exists and to give all possible factual information. This I have attempted to do in order that the legislative branch of the Government, in which the final decision and full responsibility necessarily rests, may act.

Because it has been alleged that I would be satisfied if no further appropriation were made for the coming three months, I feel that in justice to myself I must make it clear that I am not sending this message to the Congress merely for the purpose of going through motions.

For more than six years it has been the definite policy of the President and the Congress that needy persons, out of work, should not be allowed to starve; that it was an obligation of the Federal Government to give work to those able to work and an obligation of State and local government and of private charities to take care of those needy persons who are unable to work.

That policy, I am more than ever confident, is right. It should not be abandoned now.

More Study Needed

It is wholly within the right of any and all of us to study and work for the greater efficiency of government. For several years infinite study has been given to the problems of relief in all its forms; additional studies are proper.

But the Government of the United States is faced today with a condition and not a theory. The insufficiency of the money appropriated will compel the administrator to discharge about 1,250,000 actual workers in the immediate future.

I cannot bring myself to believe that these discharged men and women will contribute to the prosperity of the United States, nor do I believe that the merchants and landlords they are now dealing with will become more prosperous when their trade ceases.

Therefore, the responsibility for the situation in which all of these people will find themselves during the coming three months rests of necessity within the decision of the Congress of the United States.

New Deal Convert

By Ernest K. Lindley

A Man To Watch

A MAN YOU SHOULD, and probably will, hear more about during the next few months is John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury. By assignment his own special problem is taxation. Since he came to Washington 15 months ago, straight from a senior partnership in one of the largest investment banking houses in Wall street, he has learned his way around. Nobody in the Administration is tackling the problem of recovery with a more sensible appraisal of what is feasible in politics as well as economics.

Johnny Hanes' first appointment, as a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission, was the occasion for ballyhoo. Wall Street was delighted to see a man named to the SEC who knew thoroughly the technical problems of the securities market. His reception in the Roosevelt Administration was moderately friendly because he was one of the tiny handful of financial leaders who lent a helpful hand to the legislation for reforming the securities markets and to reorganizing the management of the Stock Exchange.

Has A Thick Streak Of Patriotic Fervor

MR. HANES also brought with him a very agreeable personality, an extremely persuasive tongue, abundant energy—he is 46 and thoroughly fit—and a thick streak of patriotic fervor. Without the last he would not be in Washington today. Naturally he was reluctant to surrender a desirable position in Wall Street and a large income. He resisted the pressure from Washington to come down—and the even greater pressure from Wall Street brethren who realized that he was one of the very few of their number who could pass inspection by the New Deal—until Joseph P. Kennedy got under his skin.

"You're just like the rest of those selfish —— —— —— up there," Kennedy said to him. "You've got a chance to do something for your country and you turn your back on it."

Mr. Hanes couldn't withstand that rebuke. He severed his Wall Street connections, sold various holdings—at a loss, since the recession of 1937-38 was well under way—and came to Washington to "do something" for his country. In his opinion the most important "something" that could be done was to stimulate economic recovery.

Still Suspect Among Some New Dealers

HIS FIRST efforts in that direction were not brilliantly successful. He arrived about the time Joe Kennedy was packing up to go to London and was hailed as Mr. Kennedy's successor as a general liaison man between the New Deal and Big Business. By diligent effort he persuaded a few business and financial leaders to subscribe to a promise to co-operate with the Administration in promoting recovery. But a few days later one of the subscribers let loose a scorching attack on certain New Deal policies, and not much more came of the other promises.

Henry Morgenthau, jr., took a fancy to him, made him Assistant Secretary of the Treasury last June and Undersecretary in October. In the Treasury Mr. Hanes got his teeth in a problem which he knew a great deal about as a businessman and a large taxprayer (Incidentally, Mr. Morgenthau's investigation of him before offering him the Treasury job revealed that he was one of the few big taxpayers whose only errors had been on the side of overpayment and who had never engaged in a tax dispute with the Bureau of Internal Revenue.)

Johnny Hanes is still suspect among some New Dealers. He is rumored to have advocated amending the national labor relations act and the securities legislation. The truth seems to be that he has kept abysmally silent on the NLRA, and that on the other subject his sole recent advice—given to a former business associate—has been against tinkering with any of the SEC legislation.

Working On Tax Intake Mechanism

HE HAS TAKEN literally the President's statement in his annual message: "We have now passed the period of internal conflict in the launching of our program of social reform. Our full energies may now be released to invigorate the processes of recovery . . ."

He has interpreted that to mean that this is no time to bring forward major legislation of a controversial character—either to expand the New Deal or to undo it.

He believes we can get up a real head of economic steam in the machine as it has been remodeled by the New Deal. There are a few points of excessive friction that need to be filed down and oiled. The worst ones, in his opinion, are in the tax intake mechanism. At least they were the points of friction assigned to him for examination, and he has gone about his task in a practical way which ought to command the confidence of both the New Dealers and his old associates in business and finance.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Nihilism East Of The Rhine

THERE HAVE BEEN those who have believed that a free hand for Germany in eastern Europe would mean the efficient organization of that great complex of states held between the Rhine and the Russian frontier.

Ever since the war and the break-up of the Austro-Hungarian empire publicists have been accustomed to speak of the "Balkanization" of eastern Europe, and some have looked to Germany to bring a greater amount of order into this territory. Some people believed that this would be the function of the Nazis.

On the belief that Nazi Germany is first of all a legitimate government and, secondly, represents a conservative and integrated order of society, much of the western world has gone wide astray.

As any one who reads "Mein Kampf" carefully, following its main threads through the miasma of disorganized material, must see, naziism does not represent an organized state at all. It is nothing more or less than the kernel of a movement which will theoretically come to rest nowhere until it has established the supremacy of the Teutonic and allied races over the earth, reducing the rest to vassalage.

Hitler Now Lays Claim To Former Empire

SUCH PHRASES as "the union of all Germans within the Reich" are totally misleading as descriptions of Nazi policy. They have become more and more misleading since the conquest of Austria.

For it now appears that Hitler lays claim to the whole territory of the former Austro-Hungarian Empire, in which non-Germans outnumber Germans in the ratio of 4 to 1.

Hitler's attitude toward the Austro-Hungarian monarchy is made crystal clear in his book. He believes that this territory consists of inferior Slavs, Magyars, and other not quite white people who should be ruled by the "herrenvolk"—the Germans.

It is now possible to see, first, that he really means this, and, second, how he intends to accomplish it. He intends to accomplish it by the pulverization, the atomization, of the existing states to the point where they will be utterly helpless and can be enslaved and plundered.

A Well-Organized Nation Pulverized

THERE WAS Czecho-Slovakia: A well organized, on the whole prosperous, well governed, liberal state, its finances in excellent order, its defenses admirable, its people enjoying the freedoms of Western civilization, its education progressive, its population industrious and peaceable.

Since last September this state has been pulverized.

The lopping off of the Sudetenland was accomplished with the collaboration of Britain and France on the theory that the Sudetens should "go home to the Reich"—a Reich to which they had never in all history belonged.

The lopping off of Slovakia can hardly thus be explained. It is the result of a systematically engineered coup d'etat, effected by a complete travesty of the democratic process, by revolutionary agents, treasonable Slovaks and unexampled high-pressure propaganda in a country where the press had been silenced in advance by Nazi threats.

An independent Slovakia is a monstrosity. It is incapable of living by itself as a state, and will simply become a vassal.

What is left of a progressive state—Bohemia and Moravia—is now an island completely surrounded by Germany. These, too, will be pulverized.

WHEN THIS is accomplished Poland is cut off from Hungary, and will be, probably, the next state to be smashed.

Germany will claim the provinces of Pomorze, Pozan and Silesia as being German. These are the "Sudetenlands" of Poland. They are not German and they never have been German, as far as the population is concerned.

The so-called Polish Corridor was always a land predominantly populated by Poles. Since 1918 it has become almost wholly populated by Poles.

But Germany may also claim the former Austrian provinces of Poland, to which, ethnically, she has not a shred of claim.

The technique will be exactly the same as that used against Czecho-Slovakia. There will be a continuance of the provocation of the Polish minority in Danzig in the hope that this will bring retaliations against Germans in the corridor. We shall then hear that a great power of 80,000,000 cannot tolerate the barbarous treatment of its people; there will be a mobilization on the Polish border; another ultimatum; Poland will be reminded that her ally, France, can do nothing whatever to help her; Stalin will sit tight, and Germany will accomplish her purpose "without spilling a drop of blood."

Deal With Poland Seen Likely Step

PROBABLY Germany will try to make a deal with Poland and will offer her an outlet to the sea in Libau, in Latvia. This will accomplish a double purpose. It may persuade the Poles to take national dismemberment more gracefully, and it will break up Latvia, thus carrying the pulverization process a step farther.

But the acquisition of these territories will incorporate in Germany nearly a million Poles, and the incorporation into Poland of that section of Latvia necessary for an outlet to the sea will put nearly a million Latvians into Poland, and the whole process will change Poland from being a national state into being a conglomeration of nationalities, pulverized, atomized and ripe for complete vassalage.

More Of Europe Faces Plunder Process

OF COURSE, as the Nazi empire makes its way, taking new territories, it will make no compensation whatsoever to the states which it is robbing.

The modern port of Gdynia, which has been built with millions of Polish money, will be simply taken by the Germans, just as what they have done in Czecho-Slovakia is a huge act of expropriation.

The whole of southern and eastern Europe is in for this pulverization and plunder process.

Nazi Germany does not intend to allow a single strong or numerous state to exist between her frontiers and the Russian border.

The end result of all this—revolution and chaos. It can have no other result. Everything that Germany is acquiring now is a liability. It cannot be administered in any orderly fashion, for the Nazi Reich is incapable of tolerable administration of peoples who have once enjoyed national freedom. It can only enslave them.

Most significant is Stalin's speech in which he proclaims the isolation of Russia. Not a word is being said now in Germany about the Soviet Ukraine. On the contrary, feelers are being constantly put out between Russia and Germany. The ghastly hope of certain French and British conservatives that Russia and Germany would spring at each others' throats and bleed each other white in a war is not at all likely to be fulfilled. Nazilism will not make war. Naziism is making great nihilist revolution.

House to Open Hearings Tuesday On D.C. Taxicabs

Hearings on the bill to authorize the Public Utilities Commission to limit the number of taxicabs in Washington were scheduled yesterday for next Tuesday morning, starting at 10 o'clock, by Representative McArdle (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

"Any move to limit the number of taxicabs operating in Washington brings up a variety of other problems," McArdle said.

"Both public interest and the interest of the drivers and owners of taxicabs in Washington demand that something be done to solve the taxicab problem here."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

"So You're Still in Florida"

Miami Beach, March 14.—The weather is at its best, nature is at its best, fishing is getting good, all conditions for a vacation are tops . . . So nearly everybody has left! . . . You can return from an auto trip through Lincoln road with all fenders intact . . . Fights over parking spaces are limited to two people!

The newsies have given up the cry of "Big Blizzard Sweeps North" as a means of stemming the exodus . . . The arguments over yesterday's races have fallen off 50 per cent and there has been a terrific decline in the people piping "I had the daily double on the way out but changed my mind."

Night clubs have folded and the atmosphere is immeasurably cleaner . . . The tropical vegetation is luxuriant and the gardens are filled with song birds no longer forced to compete with the hysterical honkings of the auto drivers who think anybody doing less than a mile a minute is a tortoise trainer.

The loudly dressed actors are missing . . . It is not so easy to point out a group of notorious public enemies on any street corner . . . And the motorcycle cops are filled with that happiness which comes with the realization that the wild Northern autoists have stopped chasing 'em.

For the first time since last summer there is decent fishing . . . It is seldom any good in the tourist season, when advertising alone gets the customers aboard the fishing boats . . . Within the next few weeks the sailfishing should be good and the beach and pier anglers will get the tasty pompano . . . Some day somebody will write a good yarn on Florida fishing and it will be very interesting to the fellow who thinks the tropical waters are always a fisherman's paradise.

The period of noise, chaos, delirium, panic, disorder, publicity and bunk is declining . . . There is now something like calm, beauty, order and good manners . . . Even the horses race more leisurely!

The Tropical Park bugle blower takes it easy . . . The jockeys seem in less haste . . . The Stevens boys are caught sitting down occasionally . . . The $2 bettor walks to the windows at a casual gait instead of making the approach like a Notre Dame backfield man . . . And there is a much longer interval between the cry of "Come on, baby! You're the class horse!" and "the big bum dogged it."

People go to park concerts instead of bingo . . . You can play 18 holes of golf on any course in less than five hours . . . The hotel managers now speak to the guests . . . People go to drug stores to get medical supplies instead of to play punchboards, get three-decker sandwiches or buy a Racing Form . . .

And the electric rabbit has relaxed . . . is taking it easy . . . He knows those dogs are too exhausted to get near him, even if he walked.

Senators Insist On Labor Act Public Hearing

Committee Sanctions Delay but Votes To Fix Date

First skirmishes on highly controversial proposals to amend the national labor relations act occurred at yesterday's meeting of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, with a decison to meet next Tuesday to fix a date for the beginning of public hearings.

Before committeemen was a letter from President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, insisting on Congressional action upon a batch of A. F. of L. amendments

The amendments were designed chiefly to protect the A. F. of L. against what it claimed to be favoritism shown the Congress of Industrial Organizations by the National Labor Relations Board.

Committee members said privately the peace negotiations between the A. F. of L. and C. I. O., in New York, apparently were having a bearing upon procedure in Congress.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, committee chairman, after conferring recently with Secretary of Labor Perkins, had urged delay in the hope that the two labor organizations would reach a peaceful settlement.

Without a record vote, the committee adopted a motion by Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, proposing the committee "go definitely on record as favoring hearings on proposed amendments."

U. S. Detail Maps Urged as Aid to National Defense

Detailed mapping of the entire country should be undertaken immediately as an aid to national defense and economic planning, the American Society of Civil Engineers reported yesterday to the Federal Board of Surveys and Maps.

William Bowie, A. S. C. E. representative on the board's council, described the United States as "the worst mapped of any of the progressive countries."

From the defense standpoint, intensive mapping should begin in the country's border and coastal regions, he said.

Laurel Training School Held Overcrowded

Welfare officials yesterday reported the training school for feeble-minded at Laurel, Md., is seriously overcrowded and some 200 in this city are without proper training.

Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the institution, reported an average of 578.5 per day, the highest in its history, was cared for during February.

James 'Jeeter' Barton Terms Cussing Charge Just a Stunt

James Barton, who portrayed the cursing Jeeter Lester of "Tobacco Road," is shown with his wife backstage of the Earle Theater, where he defended his language used in the stage play. Women members of the cast turned against him for using the profanity

If the language of "Tobacco Road" is good enough for the audience, it's good enough for members of the cast, James Barton—who played the role of Jeeter Lester for four and a third years, only to have women members of the company turn against him on charges of profanity—declared last night.

Grim about his reprimand from the Actors Equity Association and unwilling to repeat what he had actually said, even to the extent of ....! ....! ....! Barton joined his wife in declaring he'd be willing to place even bets it has been some time since the girls in "Tobacco Road" really had red faces from hearing cuss words.

"It's just a cheap publicity stunt and I don't relish it a bit," they said after Barton's show at the Earle Theater, where he will be on the vaudeville program through Thursday, singing, dancing, and acting the drunk just as he did before he ever heard of the down-to-earth sharecropper play that brought him probably the largest audience an actor ever enjoyed outside the movies.

Although he "might have gone complete bugs" if he'd tried to keep on with the Jeeter role through three years of the New York World's Fair, Barton declared he would have stayed on a while longer if "everybody hadn't begun to get on everybody's nerves."

"And they wait four days after I turn in my resignation to start their complaint! If they had really been offended by my language, they would have said so long ago," he said.

Mrs. Stinson Testifies Artist Husband Kept Their Honeymoon Merely 'Spiritual'

Stinson

benefit and for $27,000 she gave him when they parted so he could finish a book on the Supreme Court, illustrated with graphs and charts. His lawyer said Monday that it cost Stinson most of this money for nerve treatments after the separation.

Marriage Only "Spiritual"

Stinson scraped an acquaintance with her, said Mrs. Stinson, and courted her as a caller until he moved into her home at 2419 Wyoming avenue northwest. She accused him of plotting with her nurse, Miss Jessica Shoemaker, to subdue her will with drugs and get her to marry him. She did so, she said, in a daze.

Asked whether she did not resist such persuasion, she said:

"I never seemed to resist anything. I went along like a little boob. I wouldn't do it now! I'd like to see anybody try to make me sign anything"

The marriage, said Mrs. Stinson, was wedlock in name only, because the first night of the honeymoon her husband went to her room in a Portland, Me., hotel and told her:

"Josephine, I am spiritual. I have nothing to do with the body. I now will bid you good night."

Talks Only to Judge

Justice Luhring, who heard her lawyers, A. K. Shipe and Alvin K. Newmyer, argue that she was entitled to an annulment because of this, asked:

"Did you have relations as man and wife?"

"No. Never. Emphatically no," said Mrs. Stinson, who then resumed her story of the pink and white pills she said were given her to break down her will.

Attorneys George D. Horning, jr., and Carroll L. Beedy, former Representative from Maine, thrust constantly into Mrs. Stinson's rushing testimony with legal objections. Once she snapped:

"Mr. Beedy, don't interrupt me. I am talking to the judge. I may talk to you, may I not judge?"

The lawyers resumed their interruption. Mrs. Stonson then cried:

"Please. Please. Keep still everyone, just for a minute."

The lawyers and modishly dressed society spectators kept still. Justice Luhring sighed and ordered another recess.

One of Mrs. Stinson's friends went to comfort her and she soon recovered and resumed the stand.

Justice Luhring several times tried to block the flow of detail with which Mrs. Stinson responded to Newmyer's questions, at length causing Mrs. Stinson to protest:

"But 'yes' and 'no' seem so drab. I don't like to juggle the truth."

Says He Sought Money

Mrs. Stinson said her husband told her on the honeymoon, "I only married you for your money. I'll take over your estate very shortly and you'll be in an asylum in a week. You're crazy but you don't know it."

After they got to Washington she started to go into the library of her dead husband (William L. Crounse, from whom she inherited $700,000 in 1925) and Stinson told her to get out, that he "had just talked to Billy on the telephone and it was his (Stinson's) library now."

"I thought that was crazy because Billy was dead," said Mrs. Stinson.

The court was adjourned until 10 a. m. today.

'Conscience Fund' Boosted $554 on Tax Deadline

On eve of the income tax deadline, the Treasury's "conscience fund" was increased by $554.87 yesterday.

Heaviest contributor was a New Yorker, who sent $520 with this note: "I think I owe the Government something close to this figure for back taxes. At any rate, it eases my conscience."

A Buffalo taxpayer forwarded $2, and other contributors were from Minneapolis, Pasadena and Phoenix. Including yesterday's contributions, the "conscience fund" now totals $642,111.93.

Firemen Rescue Mother and Infant

Opposition To Sales Tax Voiced Here

Citizens Groups Vote Disapproval, Indorse Overton Formula for Greater Federal Aid

Strong opposition to a sales tax for the District and approval of the Overton formula for larger Federal appropriations was expressed last night by Washington citizens and business men's associations.

Logan-Thomas

Disapproval of a sales levy and support for a local income tax last night predominated in discussion of municipal finances at a dinner and business meeting of the Logan-Thomas Citizens Association, held at 1120 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

A majority of members also declared themselves in favor of repealing the intangible property and business privilege taxes. Only formal action on the tax problem was appointment of J. F. Ducomb as a delegate to the Citizens Committee on Fair Taxation, and H. M. Fulton to be an observer at sessions of the Congressional subcommittee on taxation.

Referring the Griffenhagen report to a special committee for further study, the group expressed strong opposition to the survey's proposal for reducing the school board to advisory status.

North Seventh Street

The Northern Seventh Street Business Men's Association went on record last night, after a bitter debate, opposing any sales tax.

The resolution upheld present business privilege and personal taxes here at the same time that it condemned "any new taxation such as the sales or 5 per cent net income taxes."

A resolution was adopted donating $10 to the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club.

Cathedral Heights

Formation of a Northwest Council of Citizens Associations last night won the approval of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association.

The group also heard L. A. Carruthers, president of the federation, urge support for the Overton formula.

"The plan provides a ready means for determining funds to be granted to the District government by Congress," he declared, adding that the formula deserves "the backing of local organizations of the city."

Carruthers also stressed the need for reorganization of the District government and tax structure, and emphasized his belief that the legislative council favored by the Griffenhagen report should be elected by residents of the National Capital.

The association voted to contribute $10 to the Police Boys Club.

Burleith

Burleith Citizens Association indorsed the Griffenhagen report on District reorganization in principle last night, but objected to certain items in the proposal. The resolution, corresponding to the action of the Federation of Citizens Association, called for an elective city council and independent boards of education and library trustees.

Barry Farm

The Overton formula received the approval last night of the Barry Farm Citizens Association.

A resolution opposing reorganization of the city government in conformity with the proposals included in the Griffenhagen report also won the support of the association.

Addition of 100 men to the Metropolitan Police force and the installation of more traffic lights also was asked.

Harry S. Wender, president of the Southwest Citizens Association, spoke on suffrage, and Dr. H. S. Huffman discussed the need for prenatal care.

Summit Park

Installation of an additional traffic light on Bangor street between Austin and Thirty-sixth street southeast, and a new street sign at the intersection of Bangor street and Suitland road was urged at a meeting of the Summit Park Citizens' Association last night.

The new apartment development on Alabama avenue betwen Pennsylvania avenue and Thirty-eighth street southeast was discussed at the meeting.

President to Hold Up Appointment of New Commissioner

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated that appointment of a District Commissioner to fill the existing vacancy would be delayed until the question of how the District government is to be reorganized is finally settled.

At his press conference, he said there would be no developments in regard to a new Commissioner for some time. One of the reasons, he said, is the controversy over the Griffenhagen report on reorganization of the District government. There are other reasons, he declared, but he did not name them.

More Than $10,000 Pledged in Churches' Drive

More than $10,000 in cash and pledges was reported by workers at last night's closing meeting of the Washington Federation of Churches' annual financial drive. According to officials, complete reports will boost the total to almost $15,000. The goal is $18,165.

Calvary Baptist Church, which exceeded its quota of $800 by $367, led the individual congregations.

Washington Gives a Tumultuous Welcome To Conductor Toscanini and N. B. C. Orchestra

'Cross-Section' Audience Applauds Spirited Playing

By Ray C. B. Brown.

The National Broadcasting Co. presents Arturo Toscanini and the N. B. C. Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night. Program: Overture to "the Barber of Seville" (Rossini), Symphony No. 7 in A major (Beethoven), "Le Fontane di Roma" (Respighi), "Siegfried's Rheinfahrt" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" (Wagner), Overture to "Tannhaeuser" (Wagner).

Offered the opportunity to pay their respects to Arturo Toscanini and to hear in close proximity the orchestra to which they have listened through their raido sets on many a Saturday night, citizens of Washington filled Constitution Hall last evening and gave a tumultuous welcome to the distinguished conductor. It was one of those occasions when anticipation prepares a nervous tension which finds its release in ovational enthusiasm, and the storm of applause which greeted the director as he made his way to the podium was such as a conquering hero could have expected.

In one sense, it was an audience of hero-worshipers, for the prestige of Toscanini has made him an almost legendary person during his lifetime. In the assemblage were music lovers in plenty, but its multitudinous entity was composed of representatives from every strand in the fabric of the National Capital's life: members of Congress, diplomats, Army and Navy officers, departmental heads, social leaders and business men. In the same row with ardent musicolaters were men and women to whom music is an incidental part of other interests, and the diversity was a token of the common impulse which had brought them together. All were united in the tribute to a great musician whose unquestioned devotion to the art which he serves has brought him to his eminence.

It is one of the penalties of eminence to be admired and lauded for that alone, and a famous artist must sometimes wonder how much of the adulation is meant for his art and how much has been excited by his repute. Toscanini impresses one as a very humble recipient of honors which he feels should be tendered to the music he interprets rather than to himself. All his resources are concentrated upon the creation of beauty and his conducting is a withdrawal into an inner realm from which he returns to the noisy world with an air of bewilderment. From this apparent daze he emerges with a gracious acknowledgement of the tribute and a deprecation of his own importance in what his musicians have accomplished under his guidance.

Last night's audience did not hear Toscanini at his best because the N. B. C. orchestra, for all its technical excellence, has not yet attained its absolute unity. Time is required for a body of musicians to fuse their individualities into a consentient whole and to establish a perfect rapport with the conductor. One is aware in this orchestra of an uneasiness which may arise partly from awe of their august leader and partly from the consciousness of their relative inexperience in the present association.

This impression may be erroneous, but it must nevertheless be recorded for what it is worth. More than once one felt that the corporate unity of the group was that it was not responding, despite its zeal, with the unanimity that bespeaks unshakeable confidence. Yet its technical facility and its spirited willingness produced some remarkable results.

The concert began with the most delightful reading of Rossini's overture to "The Barber of Seville" that it has been my lot to hear. Toscanini treated this piece of music as though it were a work of art entirely dissociated from its purpose as introduction to a comic opera. He may have had in mind that it actually has no relation to the stage work which it precedes.

The overture was composed for "Aurelian in Palmyra," which was produced in Milan in 1813. Two years later Rossini, either because he was pressed for time or too indifferent to court his muse, used it as the overture to "Elizabeth, Queen of England," his first opera for the Neapolitans. Again in 1816, he resorted to it in Rome for the premiere of "The Barber."

Toscanini's reading of Beethoven's seventh symphony was masterly in rhythmic drive and in evocation of the music's essential dynamism. Emotionally it was Italianate, intensely dramatic in contrasts and in the overwhelming power of the climaxes. The audience, fully observant of silence between the movements, was moved by the performance to a prolonged outburst of applause.

Respighi's symphonic poem, "The Fountains of Rome," was disclosed with a sensitiveness of color and a precision of detail that brought out its full impressionistic values. The remainder of the program was Wagnerian: "Siegfried's Rhine Journey" from "Die Goetterdaemmerung" and the overture to "Tannhaeuser." In these numbers the orchestra was called upon for its splendors of resonance, and was not found wanting.

Nichols Dims Hope for D. C. Reforms

Hits Griffenhagen Report for Failing To List Economies To Be Effected

The Griffenhagen plan for reorganization of the District government yesterday ran head on into the vigorously expressed objections of Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, a member of the sub-committee holding hearings on it.

The hostility of Nichols, who criticized the report for failing to provide detailed estimates on economies and efficiency to be effected, dimmed prospects of favorable action on reorganization of the District government this session.

Earlier, Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, had criticized the plan and indicated he would oppose its adoption.

Insists on Efficiency

Vainly, Frank O. Everett, of Griffenhagen & Associates, tried to explain to Nichols that his organization had not been directed to prepare the cost studies.

He insisted, nevertheless, that a consolidation of local and quasi-Federal functions and a centralization of authority would bring about greater efficiency and substantial economies if put into operation.

When the discussion turned to how many employes might be dropped under the reorganization, Chairman Kennedy protested that any estimates of this sort would only alarm District workers who would consequently seek to sabotage the plan.

Yet one department head told him, Kennedy said, that he could operate with 80 per cent less employes than he has and probably more effectively.

"Then the trouble is with the heads of the District government," exploded Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts. "If we had three new Commissioners, perhaps we could get some of these unnecessary employes cleared out."

Collins Calls Experts

Kennedy replied that most of the employes had been hired as a result of recommendations by members of Congress and that if they were dropped they would appeal to members of Congress, who in turn would complain to the Commissioners.

"If they were my constituents," said Kennedy, "I probably would try to help save their jobs."

Bates retorted that he wanted it clearly understood he would not try to save anybody's job in the District government.

The hearing was recessed until Friday morning, when Everett will resume his explanation of the Griffenhagen plan.

Meanwhile, it was learned that Chairman Collins, of the House subcommittee on District appropriations, had asked Representative Kennedy and the Griffenhagen specialists to appear before his subcommittee to explain certain phases of their report.

Capital News In Brief

Bandits Rob Collector

Two strong arm bandits last night robbed a Try-Me Bottling Co., collector of $353 after assaulting him as he stood in front of the company offices at 1345 Florida avenue northeast.

William E. Gladstone, 44, of 6115 Fifteenth street northwest, told police two colored men came up behind him, placed a "hard object" in his back, and struck him over the eye when he turned around.

Forcing him into his own automobile, the bandits forced Gladstone to drive to Temperance Court, between Twelfth and Thirteenth and T and U streets northwest, where they forced him at gun point to turn over $470 in company collections and $63 of his own money.

Birds Wreck Cab

The cheery chirps of the early returning birds proved to be no harbinger of spring for a Filipino taxicab driver, who listened too intently to their whistles and wrecked his cab yesterday morning.

While cruising along North Capitol street near Adams, he mistook their notes for the whistles of potential customers and turned too fast, losing control of the wheel and plunging into an excavation.

Law-Abiding Victim

It's getting to be so that a man can't obey the law without getting "stung" nowadays, a Maryland resident found yesterday.

Harold F. Crowder, of Hyattsvill, halted his truck at North Capitol and N streets northwest when the light flashed red.

When he started again a gross carton of cigarettes he had on the seat beside him when he stopped were gone—just like that.

Cherry Blossom Festival Date Set for March 24

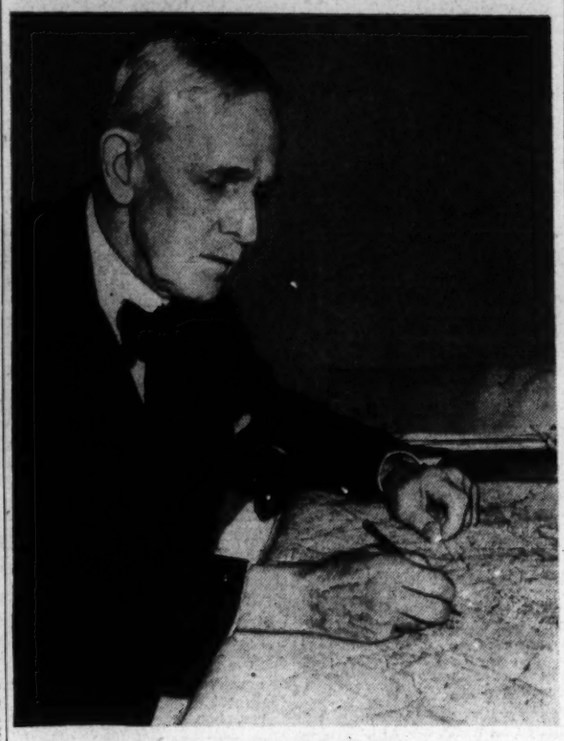
Municipal officials, members of the Greater National Capital Committee and men of science yesterday took a long look out the window from the District Building, brooded over weather reports and emerged in spring-like sunshine to announce that the 1939 Cherry Blossom Festival will take place March 24.

Mild March days have already brought a faint blush to the buds by the Tidal Basin, Albert Clyde-Burton, of the National Capital Parks, told the festival committee.

Cloudy skies will bring rain to the District today, although there will be little change in temperature, the Weather Bureau reported last night. Colder weather will head into the Capital tomorrow.

Life Begins at 70

Geologist Darton Has Enough To Do if He Lives to Be 100



DR. NELSON H. DARTON.

[This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.]

By Gerald G. Gross.

Geology must be something like a good mystery novel—hard to put aside once you are interested. Two or three sketches in this series have been about geologists who recognize no such thing as retirement. Of that mold is Dr. Nelson H. Darton.

In his seventy-fourth year, he still goes each day to his office in the Geological Survey, reluctant to drop the various investigations he was conducting when retirement age caught up with him. President Roosevelt granted him a year's extension, enabling him to complete several reports. Since then he has remained on the job, carrying on strenuous field work as well as indoor mapmaking and research, under a grant by the Geological Society of America.

"I have enough work planned to keep me busy if I live to be 100," says Dr. Darton, a scientist who rose to eminence in his profession without the advantage of a college education. "There are somethings I'd like to do in the Dakotas and elsewhere in the West, in addition to the various projects I am now undertaking here."

His chief concern at the moment is his study of the geological conditions and history of the coastal plain region of Maryland, Virginia and the District. Nearly ready for publication is his map showing the shape and position of the granite bedrock floor under the National Capital.

Few geologists, if any, know as much about the make-up of Washington's foundations as Dr. Darton. Hardly a building or memorial of great bulk has been erected here in recent years without his first being called in as a consultant on substrata conditions.

He was born a few decades too late to serve as technical adviser for the Washington Monument. Its foundation, he observes, is not the best but quite safe.

Dr. Darton's investigations have shown that, buried beneath the Capital, are sizeable deposits of gold, terra cotta and brick clays, soapstone, iron ore and other important minerals. His report on these features, soon to appear, may inspire Washingtonians to begin digging for treasures in their backyards.

He is advising the Navy Department on selection and preparation of a dam site near Quantico, Va. He is a member of the advisory council, Federal Board of Surveys and Maps, which meets twice monthly, as well as of numerous professional and honorary societies.

With spring approaching, he will soon be out in the field again, tramping over rough terrain like a 16-year-old.

Dr. Darton, his wife and their children live at 6960 Brookeville road, Chevy Chase, Md. If it did not take so long to walk from that address to his office in the north Interior Building he would probably hike to work, instead of taking the bus.

Mrs. Emily Moran Divorces Banker; Gets $433 Alimony

Mrs. Emily R. Moran, of 2000 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday was awarded a divorce and $433.34 monthly alimony from Howard Moran, vice president of the American Security & Trust Co. Justice O'Donoghue signed the decree after hearing evidence that the couple had lived apart more than five years.

Mrs. Moran received custody of their one child, Howard, 11.

Her complaint said Moran had an income of $1,500 a month.

Bar Assails Warrantless Arrests

'Investigation' Jailing Reported 40.3% of Total, Except for Traffic, Disorder

The District Bar Association last night assailed recent practices of police in making wholesale arrests without warrants and holding prisoners incommunicado.

The action followed a report on a survey of police stations over a period of a week which showed 40.3 per cent of all prisoners, except those held for traffic and disorderly conduct offenses, were imprisoned for "investigation."

An investigation of "three representative precincts"—the Second, Third and Seventh—revealed, the report also stated:

Of 897 persons arrested, 73 or 8.1 per cent were held for "investigation" and not charged with any crime.

Of 290 arrests, the total after excluding traffic cases, the percentage for "investigation" was 25.1.

Presented by Edmund H. Campbell, chairman of the civil liberties committee, the report condemned "arrests without warrants," "dragnet" arrests and holding individuals incommunicado. The association voiced overwhelming approval of the report and authorized further study of the problem.

The group also attacked the present proposed constitutional amendment giving national representation to the District on the grounds that it did not give Washington voting rights equal to those of the States. The proposed amendment gives Congress power to determine the number of Senators.

Other resolutions opposed prohibition for the District and the sale of intoxicating liquors over lunch counters.

The association appropriated $15,000 to employ attorneys to render free legal aid for indigent clients at Municipal Court. Robert D. Wise and Joseph I. Cavenaugh have been retained for the positions. Last year they handled 1,355 new cases.

Campbell's committee included Dean Acheson, Frederick A. Ballard, Edward Burling, jr., James Kirkland, G. Kibbey Munson, John H. Pratt and Oscar W. Underwood

Wife to Plead For Mate Who Beat Children

Family Wants Court To Release Convict From Year's Term

Mrs. Nora Poff was planning yesterday to appeal to District Court for the release of her husband, John, a 36-year-old WPA worker, who was sentenced to a year in jail Friday for beating his two young daughters in a drunken rage.

Mrs. Poff, an attractive woman of 26, and the five young children who with her faced destitution when Poff was sent away, all want him back—for a number of reasons.

First of all, they need his support. For, despite the fact the family has been fed so far—largely through the generosity of anonymous donors of food, clothing and money, Mrs. Poff doesn't want to accept charity forever.

And, realistically, she doesn't expect the contributions to continue—forever, although she is very appreciative. "People have been awfully generous," Mrs. Poff said, "and I certainly thank them for it," she declared.

She will probably have to vacate the shack at 619 I street southwest the Poffs call "home" when the rent next comes due, for example.

But there are other reasons besides economic that make the family want Poff back home again.

Five-year-old Margaret Ann, whose testimony that he beat her was instrumental in convicting Poff, says "I want Daddy home. I wouldn't have said that if I'd known they would send him away."

Betty, 8, wants Poff back "because he always used to be good when he wasn't drinking. He kept those big rats off, too," she added.

Ten-year-old Paul "is always asking about Daddy" Mrs. Poff said, and as for herself—well, she hasn't slept a single night since he's been gone.

Cast to Improvise Lines of Playlets

Knowledge of plot but not of dialogue is demanded of the juvenile cast in two playlets to be presented March 28 for the benefit of the Goodwill Industries, 1218 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

The cast is presenting "Pot Luck" and "A Lady in Waiting" in the hopes of impressing other children that those less fortunate are benefitted by donations of old toys and clothes to Goodwill Industries, which repairs and sells them. Each actor will improve his own lines.

Phi Delta Thetas To Hear Ghormley

Rear Admiral Robert H. Ghormley and John R. Ballou, president of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, will be the speakers at the founders' day banquet, Saturday evening at the Carlton Hotel, of the Washington Alumni Club.

Invitations have been sent to Senators Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Minton, of Indiana; Representatives Collins, of Mississippi, and Lemke, of North Dakota, and Justice McReynolds, of the Supreme Court.

Ballet Will Feature Capital Compositions

Three new compositions by District musicians will feature programs to be presented by the Washington National Ballet, March 24 and 25, at King Smith Playhouse. The numbers, collectively entitled "'Fridays and Saturdays at Nine," include "Paris by Gaslight," a composition of Miss Grace Shanton; "Fiddler's Reel," by Mary Howe, and Robert G. Barrow's "Three Colors."

Brotherhood to Meet

The Takoma Lutheran Brotherhood will meet at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Takoma Lutheran Church, Seventh and Dahlia streets northwest.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

RIVIERA SWANK: Scads of the plushier society folks, also famed singer, John Boles, attended the opening of Pete Macias' new orchestra at the Lounge Riviera. Young Ed McLean was there with Stellita Stapleton and John Galliher. Dr. and Mrs. Pete Moran were parked at the ringside, she very gorgeous in white satin, topped with a red fox cape. Peggy Gibbons and Mrs. Earl Mackintosh rushed the springtime in brightly flowered dance frocks. Also seen—Senator Elmer Thomas, Mrs. Karl Corby. Around midnight a pretty spot of exhibition waltzing was presented by Ted Norman and Harriet Kroncke, and Miss Armian Bakshian contraltoed a pair of modern ditties.

MACIAS

"TINY" IN CAPRICE: "Tiny" Meeker's new trio, all togged out in white ties and tails, made an impressive debut in Cafe Caprice. The combination of "Tiny" on the bass, Eddie Whitesell on the accordion and Russ Cullen saxaphoning, lends itself to swiftly paced and highly melodized dance music. Seen a-dancing: Manager Daniel Wathey, of the Roger Smith Hotel, and his attractive brunette wife; Steve Le Sieur (whose band was on the Powhatan Roof last summer), and a tall and lovely lady in black, with ivory lace, who turned out to be Mrs. "Tiny" Meeker.

NOVACHORDING MILTON: Rainbow Room's Milton Davis vows that he feels like a whole orchestra when he plays his new novachord. "You can make this instrument sound like practically any other instrument, from grandma's harmonium to an oboe," he says. (See picture of Milton and novachord above.)

NEW SLAVIC DIVA: Ada Lubina, Russian contralto, made her bow at the Troika last evening, sang rather marvellously, we're told. Mme. Lubina was a member of the most wonderful of Russian theatrical productions, the "Chauve Souris," has appeared more recently at Manhattan's St. Regis and Maisonette Russe.

MORE FUN! It's "Fun Night" again at the Shoreham this evening. More juvenile games and general horsing around—also expensive prizes.

Maurice and Maryea, Shoreham's sleek new dance team, appeared before the King and Queen of England when they visited Paris last summer. Honey Murray dances a la Eleanor Powell. But one must admit that Pete, the boxing kangaroo, steals the show. Pete boxes very prettily with his master, Ted Elder, and then suddenly goes barroom fighter and uses his feet to smack Mr. Elder horizontal!

CO-OPERATIVE REVIEW: While Lotus' new Frances Allis dancers are among the niftiest steppers who've visited town this year, they have an extra claim to fame. They're the only co-operative dance organization in the country. Profits are paid into a sinking fund. If a girl becomes ill, her salary goes right on until she can return to the group. Any question of discharging a girl is the subject of general debate and agreement. Only girl who's ever been let out had to go because she couldn't bring herself to reduce extra poundage. This has been going on for three years so the co-op idea seems to have worked out all right. The girls are doing a brilliant Spanish shawl number, "Mood Indigo" and a waltz fantasy. Other current Lotus specials—the dancing De Meranvilles and Pete Marconi who does accordion impressions of famous orchestras.

BILTMORE RECORDS: Shar-Zad's Biltmore Boys are negotiating with a major recording company and expect to blossom out on the whirling platters within a month or so. Here's hoping they do their very special version of "Mrs. Mose Has a Million Beaus Since Old Man Mose Is Dead."

SKIPPING ROPE: Bamboo Gardens' Irene Hart has taken to rope skipping this week—and on her toes, at that. There's an Egyptian dance, very seductive, by Betty Dan. Alice Mack does acrobatics.

Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, and his new novachord

Three of those high-test "Dance Cocktails" do a ballet number. Colorful parade numbers, too, and Marian Dawn sings "Penny Serenade" like a million dollars.

HEART BELONGS TO DADDY: She's a captivating Irish lass with 22 new dresses and expects a "beyootiful big blue automobile" for Easter. She admits that her "heart belongs to daddy," and it's sure that daddy can't resist her. She's Sook Fitzpatrick, 4-year-old-daughter of Jim Fitzpatrick, saxophone player with Paul Kain's Metronome orchestra.

FITZPATRICK

ASCENDING MIKE: Howard Topham, singer-pianist in the Uptown cocktail lounge, both sold and personally installed the Pirate Den's trick microphone which is raised and lowered by cable.

Muralist Barry Barreto working furiously on that huge painting of Neptune that will adorn the foyer of the new Neptune Room.

Madrillon's singer, Mary La Marre, looking like a daguerreotype in black chiffon frilled with cream lace and with a tiny locket on a black ribbon round her neck.

Impresario Maurice Kafka (Mayflower) being distinctly unenthusiastic about the current song output, but opining that "This Is It," from the Ethel Merman show; "Stars Get In Your Eyes" is the best of the boiling.

Bill Barry (King Cole Room) on the telephone. "You want to know what I look like. Well, you know Clark Gable? You know Robert Taylor? You know Tyrone Power? I don't look like any of 'em." Then hanging up in a hurry.

Louanna, Mayfair's warbler-pianist, telling of the picnic cameramen had when they took pictures of her and Leo. Louanna's the taller, you know—so Leo had to stand on a box to get the right effect.

Oscar, of the Hi Hat, telling how little Conni Dell went after her present singing position at that popular spot. It seems that Conni called him up at 8 in the morning, which is about the middle of the night so far as Oscar is concerned.

THEATRICAL RENDEZVOUS: If you want to see the performers in the Earle Theater's stage show, just sit around Dick's Grill for an hour or so. They'll all be dropping in—and quite a few of them will be in make-up. Y'see, Dick's is both convenient to the Earle and has the kind of atmosphere stage folks like.

Hollywood Not Always The 'Maker or Breaker'

Actors Sometimes Shape Their Own Careers; More About 'Five Kings'—and More to Come; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

HOLLYWOOD BEARS a wide reputation as the maker or breaker of acting careers, both established and embryonic. Sometimes, however, it is the actor who makes or breaks his own career—and, if he breaks it, retrieves it as best he can.

There was the case, for example, nine years ago on a sound stage at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, in Culver City, where a tall, dark, vital young man, in white tie and tails, stood nervously on the sidelines, mumbling dialogue to himself while the great Garbo prepared to walk before the cameras for a scene with him—a scene which meant his future or oblivion in Hollywood. He had played only one small part for the gelatins at another studio, after having been "discovered" by a Hollywood agent and rescued from a life of clarinet-tooting with an orchestra. Garbo had seen a screen test of the youth and had personally selected him to play her young lover in "The Kiss."

BELL

In due time Garbo appeared. The director called for "action." The young man spoke his lines, took the glamorous Garbo boldly in his arms and kissed her, although secretly he shivered in his pumps and died a thousand deaths. The star graciously complimented him upon his performance. The young man breathed a silent orison to Allah. The public and the critics later said nice things about him.

"It is the beginning," said the young man to himself. "I am on my way to stardom. The magic touch of Garbo will do the trick." he was right.

He did reach stardom and then developed a sudden and inexplicable allergy toward acting and wanted to be a director. He directed one picture—"Hearts of Bondage," for Republic. Then he started on the comeback trail in front of the lenses. He has done pretty well, since, in "Holiday," "Young Dr. Kildare" and various other pictures of comparatively current release.

The youth's name is Lew Ayres, who soared to the heights in "All Quiet on the Western Front." He will be seen, beginning Friday, on the screen at the Earle in "Spring Madness," with Maureen O'Sullivan and Burgess Meredith, the Prince Hal and King Henry V in "Five Kings," now playing the National.

Mr. Ayres seems to be one who can change horses in midstream and then change back again successfully.

Speaking of "Five Kings," there was a reason for the late curtain—12:30 a. m. it was—on Monday night. A wire to this desk, received in the wee small hours of Tuesday morning, too late to make that morning's paper, explained the whole thing. This is what it said: "Apologize for tardy curtain 'Five Kings' tonight. Fire Department required extensive change in apron construction, causing five-hour delay in assembling set. Curtain on schedule hereafter." That last sentence means that the curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock at nights throughout the remainder of the week and at 2 o'clock for the Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees. With the play running on its regular schedule, the final curtain should be down at approximately 11:30 p. m., instead of Monday night's 12:30 a. m. And remember, there is no Friday night performance, on account of because Orson Welles, adapter and star of the play, has to do a broadcast.

The title of "Five Kings," incidentally, is more or less in the nature of a promissory note. There are only two of the kings in the Part I of the Shakespearean symposium which Orson Welles plans to make one of his monumental contributions to the contemporary theater.

A second evening's entertainment—and "Five Kings," even in its present form, is nothing if not that—Part II of "Five Kings," will be derived from "Henry VI," Parts I, II and III, and "Richard III." This will not be ready before next fall.

In the meantime, the present introductory movements of "Five Kings" are such as to excite the keenest interest on the part of students of Shakespeare, by reason of their drastic departure from the usual methods of presenting the works of the Bard—just as was true in the case of Welles' "streamlined" production of "Julius Caesar," presented here last year.

Probably at some later date, this column will have something further to say concerning the skill of Mr. Welles in modernizing plays that heretofore have been staged and interpreted in a distinct, time-worn and stereotyped groove. First we will have to view the last act of "Five Kings," as it is being unfolded on the stage of the National this week. The late curtain precluded that on Monday night, barring only a brief glimpse of the first scene. That was the scene in which we were particularly interested, since we last saw it enacted by the late Richard Mansfield in the Grand Opera House, in Chicago, at about the birth of the century.

As far as I was able to judge from the fleeting glimpse, Mr. Welles and Burgess Meredith, who acts the scene, have done pretty well for themselves.

A letter dated March 13, from Mrs. Mary L. Golden, 1801 Sixteenth street, has this, in part, to say: "I have just learned that 'Spring Madness' will be shown at the Earle Theater soon. It might interest you to know that my daughter, Eleanor Golden, who lives at the above address, was the author of the original play, written and produced at Smith College as 'Spring Dance.' It was written about real people there. This play was adapted to the New York stage by Philip Barry and was given at the Empire Theater there, under the name of 'Spring Dance.' It was sold to M-G-M and now appears as 'Spring Madness.'" Just one more addition to Washington's notable contributions to the theater.

At least one drama desk finds itself in an annoying position. There is too much work to be dovetailed successfully with too many parties.

On Monday night, for example, John Boles, headlining this week's stage bill at the Capitol, was guest of honor at a rout in the Riviera Lounge, 2400 Sixteenth street, as half of a double-barreled gesture to his friends waved ceremoniously by Carter Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc. The other recipient of the tribute was Pete Macias, whose band took up its duties at the Riviera that night. That late curtain at the National did us dirt on this occasion.

This afternoon, from 4 to 6, under the same auspices, a cocktail party is being tossed in the rooms of the Variety Club, in the Willard, in compliment to Clem McCarthy, eminent sports authority, who succeeds Mr. Boles as the topliner of next week's bill on the Capitol stage. This might be a little easier. If Mr. McCarthy keeps up his usual verbal pace it ought to be possible to converse with him a quarter of an hour in no more than five minutes flat!

12 P. M.: "Marian Anderson," a French official assures at the Monte Carlo, "will be made a member of the French Legion of Honor. It will be announced soon" . . . "The G-men were investigating the WPA writers project here last week for Red activities," a writer informs at the Tavern. "They examined all the paper used at the project to see whether it was the same kind of paper used by some Communist publications" . . . "Eddie Rickenbacker was tendered a party at the World's Fair when he joined the sports committee," a Fair executive relates at the Versailles. "Whalen, as toastmaster, introduced Rene Blum, brother of former Premier Leon Blum, but said he didn't know how Blum's presence was relevant. What Whalen didn't know was that Rene Blum's two-year work—a Sports Encyclopedia—is accepted as the authority on all sports matters in all Europe."

1 A. M.: "William C. White, whose story, 'Crisis,' just appeared in the Saturday Evening Post," an editor states at the Gay Nineties, "rode in a bus last week. Behind him sat two ladies, who were discussing personal matters about their husbands. They spoke in Russian. When the bus stopped at his street, White turned to the ladies and said good-by to them—in Russian. He worked four years in Moscow, under Walter Duranty" . . . He put up all the lights in my home town, Weatherford, Tex." . . . "Here's the real reason why Leon Blum postponed, for a couple of weeks, his visit to America," a foreign official reports at Armando's. "He wanted to wait until after March 15—the date set for Italy's blow-off" . . . "Senator Wagner, author of the labor relations act, was stranded inside the Shoreham Hotel in Washington when the strike and picketing began," a labor executive informs at Leon and Eddie's. "He contacted some of the strike-leaders, and so the picketers kept away from one of the side-doors, so that Wagner could leave the place and live somewhere else."

3 A. M.: "The room is closing now, and everybody else is gone," Guy Spaull, who appears in the new Judith Anderson play, "Family Portrait," tells the headwaiter at the Rainbow Room . . . "All right, you can do it now," the headwaiter approves—and so Spaull, who had waited all night for this goes to the rarely used pipe organ and strikes a few notes . . . "I just saw Brian Donlevy, who was accidentally stabbed by Ray Milland in Hollywood," a film director reports at the Swing Club. "They met again, in the commissary, and Donlevy ordered: 'Just bring Milland one piece of silverware—a spoon'" . . . "Billy Rose heard Aaron Copland, the composer play selections from his children's opera," a song-publisher relates at the 18 Club. "Billy congratulated Copland and confessed: 'I like your music so much I stole 'Barney Google' from it . . . 'Barney Google?' replied Copland. 'What is that?'"

4 A. M.: "And when we were married," Tallulah Bankhead states at the Stork Club, "Daddy asked me: 'You're not going to give up the stage name of Bankhead, daughter, are you?' I told him I'd keep my stage name. And yet Daddy's the only one who ever writes me letters addressed to 'Mrs. John Emery'" . . . Alan Campbell, husband of Dorothy Parker, approaches Emery and asks: "Where's Dottie?" . . . "Why ask me?" Emery shrugs . . . "Well," Campbell explains, "aren't you tired of being asked always, 'Where's Tallulah?'"

5 A. M.: "With the boro presidents of Manhattan and The Bronx fighting over Marble Hill, New York's Sudetenland," a municipal officer states at Jimmy Kelly's, "Boro President Isaacs said that if Boro President Harvey of Queens offers to do a Chamberlain and mediate it he'd throw Harvey back across the river" . . . "When the Katz baby was kidnaped last month," a lawyer relates at the Village Barn, "this friend of mine sat in an east side drugstore and told his pal: 'Those kidnapers should be hung.' The pal agreed and added: 'That's too good for 'em' . . . He was Schwartz—the man who did the kidnaping."

6 A. M.: ". . . What, dear? . . . Irwin Shaw told you his bankroll was down to $200 on the day his play, 'The Gentle People,' opened? . . . Well, let's not be sorry for people whose bankrolls are DOWN to $200 . . . My sympathies are with people whose bankrolls are UP to $200."

Spring Raises Problems for Movie Scribe

Three Romances Hang Fire, as Phones Ring Incessantly

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, March 14.—In the spring a young man's fancy turns and when that happens in Hollywood, it's news. All we wish is that the Messrs. Gable, Taylor and Power would make up their minds so we can get our regular sleep.

These gentlemen are expected to marry the Misses Lombard, Stanwyck and Annabella, respectively, but they won't say when, or where. Neither will the Misses L., S., or A. So what happens? Our phone keeps ringing in the middle of the night with queries about their romances; then we have to call them. They'd save us and themselves a lot of trouble if they'd drop by the preacher's today.

Our last query concerned Gable and Miss Lombard. It came from Mexicali, where a restaurant owner claimed he had been ordered to prepare a banquet for the nuptial feast. Gable said "fake." Miss Lombard said the same.

Fact is, they never have admitted they plan to get married in the immediate future, though they probably will. Gable is readying up his San Fernando Valley ranch for inspection by a bride, while Miss Lombard figuratively has her suitcase packed.

Gable settled more than $300,000 on his second wife, she obtained a divorce, and nothing stands in the way of his taking wife No. 3 except his work in "Gone With the Wind." If he doesn't sneak off soon for his wedding, Miss Lombard will be at work at R. K. O., and then they will have their troubles setting a date.

Taylor and Miss Stanwyck have been equally as coy about their wedding plans, if any. She has sold her house, though, and he has built a new one and that can mean anything. The experts have had them marrying momentarily for the last two years, or ever since Miss Stanwyck obtained her divorce from Frank Fay, but they still haven't bought a wedding license.

Then there is Tyrone Power and Annabella, the French girl who dropped a husband and her last name in one operation. They met in South America a couple of months back and they've been chummy ever since. There even have been reports in prints that they are married secretly.

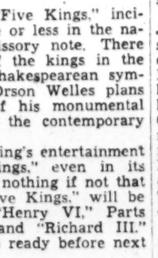
These doubtless came from Hallywood's leading fortune teller, a vivid redhead, about 50 years old, who wears a white satin uniform with a blue cross embroidered on her chest, and who keeps her crystal ball in a bungalow near Hollywood boulevard.

This seer, who has her walls plastered with pictures of movie stars, mostly inscribed "gratefully yours," went into a trance the other day for our special benefit. When the ghosts were walking properly through her dining-conference room, she informed us that she saw Power and Miss Annabella taking their vows in South America. All she saw was the principals. She couldn't see any of the background. Therefore she did not know exactly where they were married. Neither could she spot any calendars on the ghostly walls of the South American preacher's home. So she didn't know the date.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 14.—Thank heaven, Paramount has a honey in "Midnight." It's a riot of laughs from beginning to end. Nice people who are witty, without straining to be, well-dressed, well backgrounded, not just a lot of dull wastrels, but society that sparkles. It's great fun.



HEDDA HOPPER

If that fine actor Jonathan Hale were superstitious, the following might affect him. He did a short with Chick Sale and got his autograph on his script, just before he died. Got an autographed picture of Thelma Todd and one of Warner Orland just before they passed away. And these are the only autographs he has from picture people. No, he's not asking for any more.

Tillie Thompson, assistant to Charlie Richards, casting director for Selznick, has over a million miles in the air to her credit. She once had a pilot's license, but found it too expensive to keep up. Sells airplanes on the side. Attention: Gable, Fleming and Beery.

Edwards Arnold spoke at the Tropics before a group of junior workers. He posed all over the place with them. New background for Edward, who seldom pokes his nose into a cafe. He's an ad for home cooking!

Word has gone out from Warner's to give Humphry Bogart a romantic build-up. His missus asks, why?

Woody Van Dyke furnished roller skates to Ernest Truex and Jimmy Stewart on "It's a Wonderful World." "It may be all of that," moaned Truex, "but I've just got to have a drink of water." "Okay," boomed Van Dyke. "I'll give you 2 minutes. In the meantime we'll shoot around you." Guess Claudette Colbert was wise in taking ten days' rest before she started with him.

Richard Dix has given the finest performance of his career in "Man of Conquest." He had to, with Eddie Ellis playing Andrew Jackson on his death bed. Maybe in this picture, we'll really discover Ellis and next year reward him.

Edna Ferber is being sunkissed in Phoenix, Ariz. She will make a quick trip to Hollywood when her new book is finished.

Milton Bren and Norman McLeod will have Bob Taylor, Joan Crawford, Bob Young and Billie Burke in their first picture at Metro. Its title, "Remember," will be changed.

Wonder if Twentieth Century-Fox will take backgrounds for their two pictures, "The Jones Family" and "Charlie Chan", at the Fairgrounds the same day we're all up in San Francisco for the preview of "Alexander Graham Bell." I hope so, I've always wanted to get my face in one of those pictures. What a party that promises to be for us—but a headache for Fox, trying to put the writers in the right staterooms—and keep them there.

On that same date we'll have the pleasure of listening to Basil Rathbone reciting Byron's famous Manfred to Schumann's music, accompanied by the San Francisco Orchestra with Hedvig Reicher and a full chorus.

Did you know that Basil bought that new station wagon for his six dogs?

Sister Dances in Chorus With Star

When Virginia Grey played siren to Mickey Rooney in a night club scene for "The Hardys Ride High," her sister, Loraine, was one of the chorus girls who observed the intrigue from the front line.

The chorus of 12 girls also included Marilyn Kinsley and Lee Bailey, both of whom studied dancing as stand-ins for Eleanor Powell, the queen of taps.

Auto-crat

Claude Rains indulges in only one extravagance—but a good one. He owns five automobiles, all current models, all different makes.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 14 (I.N.S.).—Ronald Colman, who was willing to play Tom Ransome in "The Rains Came"—for $250,000 and a percentage of the profits—and Clive Brook, who made tests in England which haven't yet arrived, might as well concentrate on something else. Darryl Zanuck today borrowed George Brent from Warners for Louis Bromfield's blase, disillusioned hero, and Brent is an excellent choice. I am confident, since seeing him in "Dark Victory" that he will turn in a fine job.

LOUELLA PARSONS

You really have to hand it to Darryl Zanuck. Once he made up his mind to cast his picture, he didn't let any grass grow under his feet nor weary months drag on, as in the case of "Gone With the Wind." Tyrone Power was chosen last week for Major Safti, the native doctor. Myrna Loy, as we told you some time ago, is the glamorous Lady Esketh, and Clarence Brown, also borrowed from M-G-M, is the director, with Harry Joe Brown as associate producer. If Clarence has his way Lana Turner will play Fern, the missionary's daughter, but let's wait for that one.

Pardon me if I use Greek mythology as a simile, but the case of Geraldine Fitzgerald is very like the story of Persephone, the goddess of spring, who had to spend six months above the earth and six months below. When Geraldine signed with Warners she stipulated that she spend six months in Ireland and six in Hollywood. But that was before she made a success in "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights." Now Jerry is canceling her engagement abroad and will be cast immediately in "Give Me a Child." She is luckier than Persephone, who could do nothing about her sad lot.

Two newsy letters from England today. One contains information about Michael Redgrave, who played opposite Jessie Mathews in "Climbing High," and who is the male piece de resistance in Elizabeth Bergner's "Stolen Life," the latter being released by Paramount. Redgrave is coming here to report to the Sam Goldwyn studio and will probably play the role of Bunny in "Raffles," opposite Niven. He is described as extremely attractive, a good actor and the type the producers need. We will reserve judgment until we see him. The other letter came from Ben Lyon and expressed concern over another Bebe Daniels, who is on the air. She is not Bebe Daniels Lyon, as our Bebe's friends will want to know.

I'll just have to take time off to read "Address Unknown" by Kressman Taylor after all the build-up given it by those who have read it. Felix Young has bought the rights and will bring it to the screen with a bankroll furnished him by one of our well-known producers. He will choose an entire cast of unknowns. The story deals with the Nazi situation and is told in a series of letters—novel to say the least. The book only takes about 20 minutes to read but so far I haven't had even that much time.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Rudy Vallee spent his first night in town escorting Barbara Brewster to Victor Hugo's; the Bill Wellmans are calling their new daughter Kathleen Kent, Kitty for short; Mrs. Ria Gable, back in town from her sojourn at Las Vegas, glimpsed at the Santa Anita charity races; Mickey Rooney, who stands only shoulder high to that old campaigner, Malicious, doing his best to put a wreath on his neck. Finally, in despair, Mickey handed the posies to the jockey; Mrs. Edmund Lowe, in black and white, one of the stunning-looking women at the track, and Mrs. Hal Roach, in red and dark blue, was also greatly admired; the Richard Barthelmesses hosting a party for Mrs. Cole Porter, who lived in the Barthelmess mansion all the time Dick and Jessie were abroad; Anna May Wong's Chinese red fence is the mecca for many tourists; Frances Farmer has written friends she and Lief Erickson cannot make up their minds whether to go abroad or spend the summer in Hollywood; Wallace Beery, who flew to New York following his matrimonial split, is home again.

Josef von Sternberg hosting a party for Marlene Dietrich and the Richard Taubers at the Cafe Lamaze the Lynn Howard-Bobby Mullineaux romance is covered with icicles and he is now beauing Adrianne Ames places; Cary Grant and Phyllis Brooks lunching with Alf Vanderbilt, Hollywood's proudest father; Florence Rice and Robert Wilcox, a tropics twosome; Vic Orsatti and Sonja Henie, another Tropics twosome; Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Biddle getting their first glimpse of Hollywood at the Twentieth Century-Fox studios.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Metropolitan

"Yes, My Darling Daughter" renewed its downtown engagement when it opened yesterday morning at the Metropolitan Theater after a successful week at the Earle.

This light and innocuous comedy involves the services of such clever players as Roland Young, Fay Bainter, May Robson, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Genevieve Tobin and Ian Hunter.

Grandmother Robson prides herself on being the heroine of this little adventure of her granddaughter, who seeks a week-end away from family restrictions with a fiance about to sail for two years abroad. She plots on the youngster's behalf, largely because 20 years before her daughter—now in exactly the same situation—had planned to have just such a spree with her poetical boy friend. When Roland Young, the p. b. f., shows up at the house for a week-end, the situation is complete.

It is pleasant and agreeable fun, with Young and Robson getting many laughs for their spirited playing.

Vitamin A Advised For Prevention of Near-Sightedness

ARE YOU near-sighted? About one-fifth of the people in the United States are! Unless we wake up, poor eyesight bids to become as prevalent here as it is among the people of China, where poor eyesight and malnutrition are twin national charcteristics.

This estimate of near-sightedness in this country as well as the prediction that it will increase were made by Dr. Emanuel M. Josephson, New York opthalmologist, whose years of clinical research have confirmed of the close connection between the deficient diet and defective vision. A newly published book, "Near-sightedness Is Preventable," discloses the author's amazing discoveries in the prevention and treatment of this handicap through diet.

Poor eyesight occurs most frequently, Dr. Josephson points out, among the people who follow a poor dietary—the Chinese, whose mainstay is rice; the Puerto Ricans, who eat rice and beans; the Germans, whose staple is potatoes rather than protein-containing breads.

During the World War, Dr. Josephson was assistant medical director of the American Red Cross in Europe, and he tells of an incident in which Hungarian soldiers, unable to perform sentry duty because they could not see at night, were told by their doctor to eat grass—"one of the richest sources of Vitamin A, the vitamin so important to eyesight."

Malnutrition in this country increased through the depression and the extensive Vitamin A deficiency was noted by Dr. Josephson in a study of New York school children. An astonishing improvement in their vision followed the administration of cod liver oil. One youngster under Dr. Josephson's supervision was given three raw carrots a day and a teaspoon of haliver oil three times a day. Within two months his eyesight had improved to such a degree that he was transferred from the sight conservation class to a class with children of normal vision.

Near-sightedness is associated with rickets in young children, and may develop during some infections or contagious disease, especially if the child has fever, or it may occur in the teen age when glandular and chemical changes take place in the body, Dr. Josephson says. For the prevention of rickets, he recommends prenatal care of the mother and the administration of codliver oil as soon as thec hild is old enough.

Advises Minerals

With any of the contagious diseases accompanied by fever, Dr. Josephson advises feeding the child excessive amounts of the vitamins and minerals, always in the form of food, and sometimes in supplementary concentrates prescribed by your doctor. It is sometimes necessary also to have glandular treatment with these cases.

On the average, the best diet for the protection of your health and eyesight is one rich in vitamins and minerals. If disturbances manifest themselves, the supplementary measures must be ordered by your doctor.

Following are the foods listed by Dr. Josephson for their high vitamin value:

VITAMIN B: Kidney and soy beans, bran, whole grain cereal, egg yolk, hazelnuts, lentils, liver, molasses, oatmeal, peanuts, dried peas, lean pork.

VITAMIN C: Raw cabbage, grapefruit juice, lime juice, lemon juice, orange juice, green peppers, tomato juice, watercress, tangerines, apples, asparagus, bananas, broccoli, liver, onions, peas, pineapple, raspberires, spinach, strawberries, turnips.

VITAMIN D: Egg yolk, herring, salmon, sardines, tunafish.

The Gentler Sex

'A Tall Dark Man'

"Well, then, how do you like Dick Powell?"

"I don't like him any more. I tell you who I've really got a crush on—this Vincent Price."

"Oh, I don't think HE can act."

"I wasn't thinking about his acting . . ."

"Well, anyway, I don't think he's nearly as good looking as Tyrone Power."

"Tyrone Power! I can't sta-and him!"

"Why, I think he's mar-r-velous! I think he's gra-a-nd!"

"Well, I still think Clark Gable's got 'em all beat."

"Oh, are you crazy about Clark Gable, too?"

"Am I? Now he really does things to me."

"There's only one thing wrong with Clark Gable."

"What's that?"

"Carole Lombard."

"I know. I simply can't see what he can see in her. Say, I tell you another one I'm mad about—Ronald Colman."

"He's too old."

"Oh, but he's got such a won-nderful voice. If you just shut your eyes and listen to his voice—"

"He's not my type at all. How do you like Spencer Tracy?"

"Oh—he's a wonderful actor all right . . . you know what I mean . . ."

"Well, of course, if you're going to see acting there's Paul Muni."

"Oh—Paul Muni."

"What's the matter with him?"

"Oh—he's all right. I just don't think that I'd want to marry Paul Muni."

"Oh, well, neither would I as far as that goes. You know I hate to say this, being as so many silly girls have got a crush on him—but I do think Robert Taylor's awfully sweet."

"Ye-es. Still he doesn't mean to me what Gable does . . . or even Cary Grant."

"Oh, say, I'm mad about Cary Grant. He's positively dangerous."

"Well, the one that really gets me going is Robert Donat."

"I've never seen him."

"You don't mean to say you haven't seen Robert Donat!"

"What's he got?"

"What's he got? He's got everything. He's good looking and he has a wonderful voice—and he can act, too."

"I don't think I'd be crazy about him."

"Say, I'm telling you you just ought to see him once. You've simply got to. Say, I tell you—let's go this evening."

"I can't this evening. Lonnie's going to meet me after work and we're going to look at a Ford coupe some man wants to trade. I might go tomorrow, though."

"I couldn't tomorrow. I may have to go to the hospital."

"What's the matter?"

"Oh, Clarence is going to have his tonsils and adenoids out. He's been having so much sinus trouble."

"Say, I bet that's just what's the matter with Lonnie."

Paris Designers Favor Silhouette

Paris (AP).—The silhouette is all things to all women. Paris designers, in launching their new summer styles, tactfully provide for all figure contingencies.

For daytime, the young and slender may wear the full swing skirts having gathers or pleats starting at a slightly low waistline. Or young things may prefer the new raised waist, where the skirt is cut high to overlap the bodice, or made higher still by the addition of a wide girdle of the skirt material. The wide girdle brings the waistline up under the bust, and goes with a skirt cut with easy flare.

Behold the dress laid with a handsome setting of rare Spode China! You're as likely as not to wear your best table service this spring as to eat from it. Chinese porcelain colors and motifs are flattering served in print form. The girl above wears a washable hopsacking frock of spun rayon and silk noil, which doesn't mean a thing to the busy woman today except that it can be translated into terms of wearability and comfort on the figure, plus exceeding good looks. Spode medallions remain dignified here against a playful background of tucked skirt fullness and a youthful schoolgirl collar

New York, March 19.

YOU MAY have heard of the great tragedy which befell Adelaide Moffett Brooks. The darling was forced into bankruptcy not long ago, and the cruel head men took away all her possessions except her wardrobe, which consisted of innumerable pairs of shoes and enough clothes to cover at least 20 girls. The miserable part of this matter lies in the fact that she is the daughter of a Mr. Moffett, who possesses great quantities of Standard Oil boodle. In addition, she sings, and quite well, in some of our fancier night clubs—just to keep the big, bad wolf from her door.

ALICE HUGHES

The plague of so-called socialites warbling in these classy deadfalls grows apace and, as is to be expected, they sing for very little but their suppers. If they end the week with taxi fare and $2 left, they are doing mighty well. One of them is Mrs. John A. Roberts, who exercises her larynx at the place called Le Mirage. It is safe to say that her wage is trivial. In the first place, she has to join the union, which is $16.50, right off the top, and her wardrobe is a big item. Mrs. Roberts tells me that her net take at the end of a week is the tremendous sum of $5.

Another baby who is competent at this ridiculous trade is a pretty girl named Eleanor French, who is giving out at the famous Stork Club. Her salary is over $100 a week, but when she is through with incidentals she is actually $5 in the red. But Eleanor says she loves her work. The prettiest girl of the lot is Cobina Wright, jr., who gets more than $400 a week, and out of this she manages to put a little aside. Her friends say she is very serious about her deep-toned crooning. She is a real career girl at this racket. As one who has watched the business very closely, I think it the last word in silliness. I only hope that the night-club proprietors cash in handsomely for they are the ones who thought it up, and my sincerest wish is that these cute dolls draw in a lot of customers.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Vicki Baum, who wrote that tremendous best-seller, "Grand Hotel," was a backstage visitor the other night. After the play she called on her old pal, Mady Christians, who is doing a great job in "Henry IV." Vicki took a great shine to the dream man of the season, the best-looking man on Broadway today, whose name is Wesley Addy and who plays love scenes with Mady. Vicki made no bones about her envy of her girl friend. And why shouldn't she.

ONE of the ecstatic plays now running on Broadway is a reminiscent show called "I Must Love Someone," a retelling of the Floradora musical show which was very famous in Daddy's time. Among the girls now taking part is Nancy Carroll, who is one of the former wives of the playwright, Jack Kirkland. Now the report dashing up and down Broadway is that a newcomer to the cast is named Gypsy Rose Lee. I trust I need not mention the fact that in the play Gyp will wear all her clothes during the performance. If she didn't, the local censor would close the show in a twink.

Style influences run madly. The latest to hit this town stems from the famous raucous underworld of San Francisco known a half-century ago as "Barbary Coast." It is notable for bold checks and stripes, and there is nothing mousey about such clothes. Girls who wear them should be very gay and dashing.

Hole Bored Into Ear Bone Offers Relief In Deafness; Modern Treatment Varies

The first hearing aid man used was the palm of his own hand. By cupping his external ear he focused and thereby intensified sound waves on the ear drum. Man alone of all the animals uses artificial means to increase hearing. To this day the hand is the most universal hearing aid.

Mechanical aids to hearing of almost every description and kind—tubes and trumpets and fans and canes, etc.—are all evidence of the continuous search of the deaf person for aid and comfort.

The use of the electric hearing aids is of somewhat recent development, although it is probable that the telephone developed from Alexander Graham Bell's attempt to construct an electric hearing aid for his mother.

Forgotten Man

The deaf person remained the forgotten man so far as hearing aids are concerned until a few years ago. Half a century passed from the introduction of the first instrument, and yet, essentially one, and only one, type of electric hearing aid was available for general use. Then in 1922 Hugo Lieber introduced the midget air receiver, and two years later his booster amplifying unit.

The modern otologist can determine the amount of impairment of hearing, and also whether any hearing aid should be recommended. A certain level of deafness (technically a loss in excess of 25 decibels) should call for a hearing aid.

The common cause of chronic deafness is so-called catarrhal ear disease. In this form the deafness is chronic and progressive and accompanied by head noises. It is probably due to a progressive hardening of the bones and tissues of the middle ear.

Remarkable Work

Some of the most remarkable work I have seen has been done on patients of this kind who had an artificial hole made from the outside of the temporal bone into the middle ear. This allows the current of air to move in and out and there is opportunity for breaking of adhesions and loosening of the tissues which have become hardened.

Today the deaf patient can get attention and a certain modicum of relief. It is true that the situation is often discouraging and little or no improvement occurs, even in the best of circumstances. But at least the deaf patient is in a better position than he was 25 years ago, when not only nothing was known, but very little interest was displayed in his plight.

Bachelor's Tip to Husband-Hunting Girls: Don't Let Men Know You Have Wedlock in Mind

WHILE RECOGNING THE NEED for an adequate and competently supervised "Bachelor-Meets-Spinster" agency in Washington, this columnist deplores the fact that such an undertaking lies outside the sphere of her journalistic efforts. I think readers will concede that I could not, in conscience, assume the very serious responsibility that would be implicit in establishing direct communication between persons who are strangers to me and to each other. Following are a few of the many letters—bravely written in light-hearted vein, yet conveying an undertone of disturbing loneliness—that have reached my desk the last week, telling a story of frustration on the part of matrimonially minded men and women. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter of March 10 from "Modern Girl" seems to call for a line from me. Why do girls make it so obvious that they want to marry somebody? I realize that God created woman to be the wife of some man, and it is good that this is so . . . Yet why does she have to be so anxious to get a man? Is not discretion the better part of valor? Why does she, by her attitude, scare a man away from the very thing he wants most—a mate and a home?

Once I was very much attracted by a lovely girl, who was, apparently, all that any man could ask for. Yet this girl had nothing on her mind but getting married. She couldn't see the forest for the trees. Her attitude preyed on my mind so much that I let the other fellow have her. She had, in my opinion, cast aside the things which make for interesting companionship.

Why cannot a fellow have a few dates with a girl without the uncomfortable feeling that she wishes to lead him to the altar just because he happens to be a nice, gentlemanly fellow? A man is scared of a girl who does not hide her innate desire to find a mate. Contrary to "Modern Girl's" findings, there does not seem to be a dearth of eligible bachelors in Washington. I have been here nearly eight years and I find that girls with brains, a good figure, some beauty and plenty of common sense have a string of suitors to compare in number with the wives of King Solomon.

As for myself, I find it most embarrassing always to be confronted with the question, posed by friends: "When are you going to get married?" It seems that my friends are more concerned to change my 36 years of happy single life than I am. However, I think I should like to marry. Certainly the family is the unit which holds the social order together. But when, after the third date with a girl, she begins to look at furniture in store windows, I am ready to run. "Modern Girl" should remember that a man may be led to the altar; but that no force, short of pa flourishing a gun, will get him there.

As I have said, I am 36. I come from a good farm home, have good health, an income (derived from hard work) which provides everything I need or want; I drink a little beer now and then, and when I meet a girl who has most of the qualifications that I think a wife should have, I will be ready to settle down. But it is most disconcerting to my peace of mind to go out with a girl whose only purpose in life is to find a husband . . .

I admit that I am somewhat hard-headed, but I have a grand time living and helping the other fellow with his cares, when I can . . . If this has any merit, print it.

BACHELOR.

Our Cockeyed Society

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: That "Modern Girl," whose refreshingly frank letter you published March 10, resents the fact that she has to spend so many evenings alone with the moon. Well, so do I. Surely there is something cockeyed with the laws of supply and demand when bachelors in the same city are doing the same thing.

I, for one, am an unencumbered and open-minded male who, without any apparent social defects, actually spend many an evening alone either with books, the moon, or a movie. Why? Because, to my mind, there is an improper distribution of social opportunity in metropolitan life. Just as there are girls who, because of their definite standards of masculine desirability, spend many evenings alone, so are there plenty of bachelors—believe it or not—who, on account of their selective tastes, do the same thing.

Maybe, in some Utopian state of the future, a clearing house will be established through which girl may meet boy, and boy may meet girl, from various and sundry classes of society; and out of which meetings real comradeship may grow. But in the meantime it seems ironic, to say the least, that there should be lonely and perhaps utterly compatible persons almost in sight of each other, who have no means of meeting.

How about supplementing your good work for humanity, Miss Haworth, by helping such persons to get in touch with each other?

Sincerely yours, LONELY MAN.

Looks Well in Swim Suit

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read with mounting hope the remarkable and excellently written letter from "Modern Girl," thinking that perhaps here is the girl for an old bachelor like myself. But, alas and alack, I find that she demands a young man—so what chance would a fellow have who had reached the ripe old age of 42? If she means just what she says—I have every qualification she demands, save only that of age (since she is 28 and probably is looking for a man approximately the same age).

Yet here in this alleged paradise for bachelors, this harem called Washington (where women are said to outnumber men by a ratio of five to one) I, too, spend Sunday evenings all alone, looking at the moon . . . In all truthfulness, I may say that I am tall and distinguished looking, look well in a bathing suit, am deeply affectionate, have three university degrees, a profession which I am not following, and am somewhat of an idealist . . .

So that the only demand which "Modern Girl" makes that I cannot possibly fulfill is that having to do with age; assuming, that is, that a man who has reached the age of 42 can no longer be considered young. Occasionally I have dates with beautiful young women, who usually give me the air after a date or two, and it may be that my age is my undoing. But here I am, deeply longing to be loved by one of the many thousands of fine young women all about me—not one of whom "Three Bachelors" (your correspondents of March 7) are able to appreciate.

Learn New Dance Steps

"I'M AFRAID I don't tango very well," Joan murmurs as Ken asks her for a dance.

How a man hates an apology like that when he expected to whirl along airily with you in the sophisticated new dances—realizes instead he's in for a toe-tangling, weight-dragging time of it.

Yet so lightly, gracefully you could step along to popular rhythms if you'd practice at home with diagrams, instructions. Quickly you could learn the tricky new steps, be sure of yourself when asked to dance.

Why, even the glamorous tango is merely a combination of simple steps. Try the Tango Open Two-Step. On count 1—Step forward on right foot. 2—Step quickly forward on ball of right foot. 3—Step quickly forward on left foot.

Other tango steps are as easy—and you soon learn to do them with the smooth pantherlike precision that's correct for this romantic dance. Glide smoothly—lifting feet clear off the floor, have little action above the hips—and you'll be perfectly in tune with the deliberate, alluring tango music.

Pause before repeating.

In the same simple way—from footprint diagrams—you can master all the smart dances done by smart people everyhere.

Be proud, not self-conscious about your dancing. Our 40-page booklet, Social Dancing Self-Taught, gives you step-by-step diagrams, instructions for basic steps and variations—in the romantic tango, the tantalizing rumba, the popular Westchester and fox-trot, the graceful waltz, lively shag. Explains correct dancing posture, tells how to lead and follow, puts you among the top-notchers at dances.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and name of booklet.

Topflight Society Crowds Constitution Hall To Applaud Toscanini and Symphony Orchestra

Brilliant Gathering in Golden Horseshoe and Center Section Clamors for More as Famed Maestro Conducts in Washington

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

SUPERLATIVES WERE FLYING right and left, at intervals, last evening as topflight society in particular and music lovers in general thundered applause that resounded to the rafters of Constitution Hall.

Arturo Toscanini, world famous conductor, and the National Broadcasting Symphony Orchestra held the spotlight through five numbers that made up the Capital's outstanding musical treat of the season. Each part on the program, from the Overture to "The Barber of Seville" on down to the Overture to "Tannhauser," had the audience clamoring for more, and even after the slight, grey-haired "man of the hour" had made his final bow and his final exit, the applause went on . . . and on . . .

HOPE R. MILLER

As brilliant a gathering as I have ever seen in Constitution Hall surged into Washington's "golden horseshoe" and the center section just before the doors closed and the first number began. To right, to left, and all around were headline names in diplomatic, official and residential circles. Top hats and tiaras were all over the place in the throng that moved through the lobby and into the auditorium. Camera bulbs flashed time and again as slim, sleek limousines rolled up to the door to deposit notable after notable. Everybody with a capital "E" seemed to be there; certainly if anyone was missing, he was not missed.

Fine feathers were very much on display. Like many musical events in Washington, last evening's had its dress parade features. Filmy spring chiffons in pastel shades, perky bows of ribbons atop curls, and smart new lace creations were scattered throughout the audience. Few indeed were the celebrities who were not there as much to be seen as to see and hear.

A center of attention before the program began, and during intermission, was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who was in a box with the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom. Mrs. Wilson was gowned in simple black velvet, set off with a gold rose on the shoulder. Mme. Bostrom also wore a black frock beneath her black velvet wrap with its white fox collar.

Justice Stone In Box Party

Among those arriving early were Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, who were accompanied by Mrs. Charles Lea as they made their way to their seats. Also with them was Mrs. Charles Walcott.

Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett had with them in their box Lady Dennistoun Burney, of London, and Baron Shell, of the Hungarian Legation. Nearby was Mrs. Robert Low Bacon with her house guests, the United States Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison, and in another box in the same section was Mrs. Tracy Downs, who had a party with her.

The Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, and Mrs. Leahy were in their box well ahead of the opening hour. She was gowned in dark red velvet, cut on simple lines.

Senator Lodge Seen in Crowd

Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge were among those enjoying the concert in the center section. Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis were also seen in the crowd; as were Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, who arrived with a party of four; Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, who was gowned in purple chiffon worn with a short sable jacket; Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, who rarely misses a concert; and Justice Felix Frankfurter, who was there without his wife.

While diplomats were not as numerous in the crowd as the tice Felix Frankfurter, who was were still a sizable number scattered through the audience. The Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, Dr. Hans Thomsen, was there; also, the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation and Mme. Galbe; the Minister Resident of the Mexican Embassy, Dr. Don Luis Quintanilla; the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Canstantin Fotitch; Anthony Rumbold, of the British Embassy and several members of Italian Embassy, including Signora Valeria Cosmelli, wife of the Charge d'Affaires.

Many Notables In Audience

Among others there were Princess Boncompagni, who had several guests with her; Dr. and Mrs. Homer S. Rainey, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, who with her daughter, Miss Peggy Essary, occupied a box; Mr. and Mrs. Turner Catledge, in another box; Mr. and Mrs. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, who was accompanied by her daughter, Janet Clapper, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mrs. James M. Helm, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, who arrived with Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Colt De Wolfe, Mrs. Thad Brown, Miss Eleanor Flood, Miss Carolyn Chantry, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, one of the most attractive women there, in a frock of amber crepe, fashioned with a full, trailing skirt and a trim jacket; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, who surveyed the crowd from a box, and many, many others.

Sir Cyril, who is widely known as a scholar, formerly was superintendent of the University of Cambridge's field laboratories, and pror to that was curator of the Museum of Archeology at Cambridge.

Other guests at last night's dinner were Senator and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, Senator and Mrs. James J. Davis, the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, the Counselor of the Belgian Embassy and Baroness Herve de Gruben, Mr. and Mrs. Gerard Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, Miss Marian Trumbull, Aubrey Morgan and Group Capt. George C. Crocuses on State Department Lawn Herald Spring, So Society Dons New Spring Hats

THE CROCUSES are up on the State Department lawn—the forsythia in Ralph Hill's front yard is blooming—and the snowdrops on the John Caswells' lawn are other signs that spring is not too far off. Blizzards in New England notwithstanding, it has been several weeks since members of Capital society already began to blossom out in spring hats.

Many persons already are thinking about gardens. Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry has gone to her house in Providence to look over the grounds, on top of a hill on the outskirts of the Rhode Island capital. Unluckily many of the big ancient trees were blown down by last fall's hurricane.

MRS. WALTER WHITE, just back from Florida, has already begun to fuss around her lovely old garden in Georgetown. The house she lived in served as headquarters of a Union general during the Civil War, and the Army Band used to give concerts on the lawn. Mrs. White, incidentally, will be joined shortly by Willa Magee, of Montreal, who spent a year here as social secretary to Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister. Her younger sister, Nora Magee, is having a turn at the job this winter.

Lady Lindsay is, of course, a famous gardner, and to her goes most of the cerdit for making velvety turf and flower beds out of the plowed-up fields on which the embassy was built only a few years ago. Lady Lindsay worked as a landscape architect before her marriage.

SENATOR WARREN AUSTIN says that Mrs. Austin can make anything grow. She finds the only disadvantage of being a Senator's wife is that she has to neglect the gardens of her home in Vermont. The beautiful grounds of Prospect Hall, Maryland home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes, are largely owing to Mrs. Himes' hard work. They are famous for their acres of tulip beds and last year Mrs. Himes transplanted hundreds of iris. Mrs. John Allan Dougherty likes to don rubber boots and overalls to work in the gardens of her summer home in Connecticut.

THOUGH Mrs. E. Matthew Hanna is to be a hostess at the New York World's Fair, don't expect her to greet you at the gate when you visit it and show you around. Her job is rather to see that all celebrities, both foreign and domestic, are entertained during their evenings in New York and even to provide them a beautiful private home in which to stay if they wish. There are 1,800 attractive New York women on the list of prospective hostesses to notables, whether mayors or princes, and these women will give dinners and teas for the visitors, or take them in as house guests. We understand that this is the first time such arrangements have ever been made at a fair.

WE HEARD THIS story at a cocktail party the other day. Two elderly cave dwellers, both perfect lady types, went to see a revival showing of "What Price Glory," in which, as you remember, everybody talks tough. At the end, one old lady said to her companion "Lets get the h—— out of here," whereupon the other replied testily "Just a minute—I'm trying to find my G—— d—— spectacles."

WASHINGTON librarians are amazed at the sudden demand for books which have been gathering dust for years—treatises on American art. You can't get one, so great is the waiting list, thanks to the contest which the Washington Gallery of Modern Arts is sponsoring. Those who successfully guess the authorship of the American paintings being shown there are rewarded with contributing memberships in the museum. People are streaming in and out at the rate of three and four hundred a day, and already 11 have made themselves eligible for memberships by guessing 75 per cent correctly. Most visitors are the kind who can identify a Rembrandt or a Renoir without any trouble, but are discovering that except for Gilbert Stuart, what they know about American art (noncontemporary) is practically nothing.

Bal Boheme To Be April 10

This year's Bal Boheme will be due in town on Easter Monday evening, April 10. It will be given at the Willard Hotel where the Arts Club will proceed to raise the roof under the guise of "Paris aux Printemps." There will be reproductions of cafes, Parisian markets, a tableau entitled "Dawn in Paris" and, to mention only a couple of other divertisements, "The Opera Ball" and "The Fete des Fleurs."

Mrs. Duncan Phillips is chairman of patronesses and Frank B. Steele, president of the Arts Club, is ex-officio member of the executive committee for the party. Lyle A. Brookover, general chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Charles Bittinger and Morley J. Williams, vice chairmen. Others on his committee are Miss Clara Saunders, Mrs. Maud Howell Smith and L. M. Leisenring.

Minister Irimescu Fetes Harrisons

The Roumanian Minister and Mrs. Irimescu entertained yesterday at an informal luncheon in honor of the American Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison.

The Harrisons were in Bucharest before being transferred to Berne and they still have an extensive circle of friends in the Roumanian capital.

Mrs. Boschen to Give Luncheon for Mrs. Vose

Mrs. Frederick W. Boschen, wife of Gen Boschen, U. S. A., chief of finance, will entertain at luncheon today in honor of Mrs. J. Redfield Vose.

Whyte Show Opens March 20

Washington artists will step into the local spotlight when their show opens March 20 at the Whyte Gallery. The exhibition, which is due to be visited by many art enthusiasts among members of Capital society will continue through April 5.

Among those whose names will be in the catalogue are Alice S. Acheson (Mrs. Dean Acheson), Edward Bruce, Nicolai Cikovsky, Olin Dows, Herman Maril, Mary Elizabeth Partridge, Marjorie Phillips, Prenstiss Taylor, Charles Law Watkins, Paul Arlt, Bernice Cross, John Gernand, Robert Franklin Gates, Elisabeth Poe, Edward Rosenfeld, Mary Bradley, Julia Eckel and Margaret Gates.

The exhibition, destined to become an annual affair, grew out of the desire to form a normal private market for the works of painters resident in Washington, Maryland and Virginia. The idea was formulated by Edward Bruce, head of the Treasury art project, and Olin Dows, his chief assistant, who proposed it to Duncan Phillips.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

Noted Painter Is Guest of Harry J. Duffey

HERBERT D. STITT, of Baltimore, who is known by all who follow the sport of kings as one of the most popular painters of horses in the United States, is down in the hunt country where he is visiting Harry J. Duffey, sr., at the latter's place, Mount Olive. One of Mr. Stitt's best and most recent pictures of a blue-ribbon thoroughbred is that of Aneroid, race horse owned by John A. Manfuso, of Washington. He has also painted Time Maker, owned by David N. Rust, of Leesburg.

Other well-known horses that Mr. Stitt has made pictures of are Inshore, with Henry Frost up—the combination that won the Maryland Hunt Cup so sensationally three years ago; Balco, for Alfred G. Vanderbilt; Canter, for W. J. Y. Martin; Ostend and What Have You, both with Bill Street in the saddle; Mrs. Curzon Hoffman's favorite hunter, with Mrs. Hoffman in the saddle, and Frank A. Bonsal on Bonmaster, several times winner of the Maryland Hunt Cup. He has also done a picture of Carle Jackson and his favorite horse. Jackson is the son of the Mayor of Baltimore and is the husband of Rosa Ponselle, the Metropolitan Opera singer.

Frank Voss, another noted painter of horses, is the guest of Paul Mellon.

AMONG THOSE entertaining members of the V. M. I. Club which was well represented in the field at Middleburg on Saturday was Miss Mildred McConnell who gave a cocktail party for them following the races that afternoon. Miss Mary Owen Lyon and Moncure Lyon, jr., were hosts at a supper party for them on Saturday evening. Miss Bettina Belmont invited them to a milk-punch party on Sunday morning and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Sands feted them at a luncheon on Sunday.

In the V. M. I. group were J. Mackenzie Tabb, jr., M. F. H. of the V. M. I. group, and four other cadets, Hugh Kerr, Val Parham, William Middleton and Scotty Thompson. Their club was started last fall and in the field they make an attractive picture, wearing their riding uniforms, caps and army boot.

Fletcher Harper, M. F. H. of Orange County Hunt, and Daniel C. Sands, M. F. H. of Middleburg Hunt, gave them several hounds from their packs, when the boys from Lexington organized their hunt.

On Saturday the cadets stayed out hunting until 12:30 and then came in to attend the point-to-point races held on Paul Mellon's place that afternoon.

Banquet Closes D. A. R. District Conference

Organization Breaks Silence In Marian Anderson Row With Humorous Reference in Skit

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor

The strict silence which has been maintained by the Daughters of the American Revolution on the question of the renting of Constitution Hall for the Marion Anderson concert was broken in a humorous vein last night at the banquet at the Mayflower Hotel, which closed the annual conference of the District Daughters.

One of the queries addressed to "Auntie Hat" in a brief skit, based on a question and answer column purporting to be from "that exotic publication, the Congressional Record," was: "What hat shall I wear at the coming concert of Marion Anderson in Constitution Hall?"

The power to the question, which was credited to Tonnis J. Holzberg, State historian for the District D. A. R., was: "By the time the concert comes off, no telling what kind of hats will be in fashion."

The "Auntie Hat" skit featured the program included amusing references to various State officers, including Miss Lillian Chenoweth, the regent, who presided at the banquet. Dr. Clifton P. Clark, of the Sons of the American Revolution, read both the "letters" to the column and "Auntie Hat's" replies. He wound up with the remark that, sitting in the president general's box in Constitution Hall and looking over the D. A. R.s in the audience, he had decided something should be done about their hats.

Everybody Given Hand-Made Hat

With this introduction, the conference pages entered, prepared to do something about them. They had hat bags for each table, containing gay paper caps as souvenirs for all 650 guests—and every one had been made for the occasion by Mrs. Holzberg and her committee: Mrs. Clyde Hamblin, Mrs. Franklin Little, Mrs. Albion Tuck, Mrs. Catherine Nagle and Mrs. David Caldwell.

Elaborate hats had been designed for the state regent and others seated with her at the head table. As they were fitted on by the pages, guests at other tables stood up to see them. "Why, Mrs. Sherman Walker's is positively chic"—Oh, how sweet Miss Chenoweth looks in hers!" were some of the comments.

The whole evening was devoted to fun as relaxation after three strenuous days of conference sessions in which business reports predominated. Representative Luther Patrick was guest speaker at the banquet and talked on "nothing serious," as he had been requested.

Lee R. Pennington Talks on Crime

Lee A Pennington, jr., of the Department of Justice, addressed the afternoon session of the conference in Memorial Continental Hall on "The FBI and the War on Crime." Decrease in juvenile crime is the primary step in crime prevention, he said. "Existing law enforcement agencies can take our present criminals and put them behind the bars, but the only ones who can prevent the development of a new crop of criminals are the older people who are taking a direct interest in the activities of young people," he declared.

Lorraine Devoe, of the Girl Homemakers Club, sponsored by the D. A. R., was presented the prize for her essay on "What It Means to Be a Girl Homemaker," one of four read to the conference.

Katherine Hanley, of McKinley, was introduced as winner of the Good Sitizenship Pilgrimage contest in the Washington high schools. Medals were given to the others, three from each school who were runners-up in the contest. These were: Betty Connolly and Marion Kerly, of McKinley; Margaret Waddell, Catherine Ritchie and Mary Jones, of Anacostia; Wynelle Jowers, Georgia Lee Norris and Maybelle Davis, of Eastern; Anne Draper, Lottie Weikinger, of Central; Sidna Buckler and Alice Neuman, Western; Caroline Parkinson, Marion Choisser and Clare Kenner, of Woodrow Wilson. Mrs. Roy C. Bowker is chairman of the Good Homemarkers' chairman.

Md. Society to Mark State's Founding

The Maryland Society of Washington, of which Col. George H. Calvert, jr., is president, will celebrate Maryland Day a day early with an entertainment and dance at the Kennedy-Warren on Friday, March 24, from 9 to 1.

The first Maryland colonists landed on St. Clements Island in the Potomac River, March 25, 1634, after a stormy trip across the Atlantic in the Ark and the Dove. Two days later these colonists, under Leonard Calvert, who had been appointed as the first Governor of the Province of Maryland by his brother Cecil Calvert, the second Baron of Baltimore, and grantee of the province under the charter from Charles I, King of England, established the first settlement in the province, and the first home of religious liberty, freedom and toleration in America, at St. Marys City on the banks of the St. Marys River.

Trust Inquiry Told FAA Is 'Inadequate'

Council Testifies Agency Too Small to 'House-clean' Industry

By International News Service.

With a declaration that "there is a good deal of the house cleaning to be done" in the whisky distilling industry, Phillip E. Buck, general counsel for the Federal Alcohol Administration, yesterday pleaded that the FAA is "obviously inadequate" in personnel to perform its duties.

He was the first witness before the temporary national economics committee, otherwise known as the O'Mahoney anti-monopoly committee, as it began hearings on the distilling industry.

No Persecution, Says O'Mahoney

At the outset Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, chairman, told the liquor producers called to testify:

"Some of you may feel that you were brought here for persecution. That is not the case. No business, no industry need fear this committee any more than a person need fear going to a hospital."

After explaining that he was appearing not as the representative of the FAA, but as an assistant to the Federal Trade Commission and the monopoly committee, Buck explained that the courts had sustained action of the FAA in refusing a permit to a corporation, because it was found the applicant was using his liquor business as a mask to cover "a most unenviable record for disregarding the law."

He said the FAA is a small agency, with a total personnel of 160 and an appropriation of $450,000—only enough to provide "a mere corporals guard" of 21 men in the field force.

Submits Charts

He submitted charts showing that Schenly Distilleries Corporation, National Distillers Products Corporation, Joseph E. Seagram & Sons, Inc., and Hiram Walker & Sons, Inc., combined, produced 60 per cent of the entire domestic production of whisky in 1934, 46 per cent in 1935, 45 per cent in 1936, 47 per cent in 1937 and 64 per cent in 1938.

Distilleries in operation in the United States increased from 7 in 1936 to 126 in 1937 and dropped back to 108 in 1938, Buck said.

These 108 distilleries produce about 102,895,000 gallons a year, while consumption averages about 70,000,000 gallons a year, he said. Annual production capacity of the 108 distilleries in operation is about 434,986,000 gallons, he added.

The committee also was told that two companies in the sulphur industry have resorted to "monopolistic practices" to control prices and maintain "remarkable profits."

Prof. Robert A. Montgomery, of the University of Texas, said the Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. had made an average net profit of 28.75 per cent on its invested capital during the last 20 years.

Freeport Sulphur Co., he said, had earned an average of 16.23 per cent during the same period.

The two companies, he testified, produced 94 per cent of this Nation's sulphur output, which is more than half that produced in the world.

Conn. Ave. Fire, Fatal to One, Investigated on Two Fronts

Coroner and Fire Marshal Begin Inquiries; Phalti Shakelford Burned to Death; Frank Sullivan, Court Aide, Has 'Fair Chance'

Two investigations were under way last night into the early morning fire at Cathedral Mansions, 3100 Connecticut avenue northwest, which took the life of Phalti Shakelford, 42, and critically burned Frank Sullivan, 31, employe of the United States attorney's office.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, following an autopsy on the charred body of Shakelford, withheld a death certificate pending further inquiry. The fire marshal's office announced it was conducting an independent investigation.

It is believed the blaze started when one of the two men dropped a lighted cigarette on the cushion of an overstuffed chair in Sullivan's fourth-floor apartment. Shakelford, apparently asleep in the chair, was enveloped in flames before he could save himself. Sullivan, a former Washington sports writer, received second and third degree burns to the face and hands while attempting to drag his friend to safety.

At Emergency Hospital last night, physicians said Sullivan had a "fair chance" of recovering.

Sullivan was appointed docket clerk in Criminal Court several months ago by United States Attorney Pine. He is a native of Washington and in addition to writing sports for a local newspaper, served as investigator of the Veterans' Administration. He was in the Navy during the war, serving on several destroyers.

Shakelford, also a war veteran, was a graduate of National Law School and had attended Georgetown University. He had worked recently on a WPA project at the National Archives. A brother, Lisle Shakelford, is en route here from Nashville.

How Many Women Lose Pounds of Fat Swiftly—Safely

And Gain the Increase in Physical Vigor, Youthfulness and Improvement in Health That So Often Comes With Excess Fat Reduction.

Here's the Plan that helps to reduce excess fat and brings into blossom the natural attractiveness and vivaciousness that, most every woman possesses.

Follow the sensible, safe, pleasing food lists inside a jar of Kruschen. Then for a wholesome, beneficial aperient effect on liver and bowels and for a mild helpful diuresis of the Kidneys—take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

In 4 weeks get on the scales and just see if you haven't lost pounds of ugly fat and gained in that energy, improvement in health and more youthful feeling which reduction of excess fat so often brings.

Don't fail to get a jar of Kruschen today. The cost is trifling and it lasts 4 weeks. If even this first jar doesn't joyfully satisfy—your money gladly returned.

Be sure and ask for and get Kruschen. Get it at any drugstore. Adv.

U. M. W. Asks 6-Hour Day, Raise to $6.50

Requests Called Most Sweeping In Coal History

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 14.—The United Mine Workers today asked that a 6-hour day and a 50 cents-a-day wage increase be written into a two-year contract by the Appalachian soft coal operators who employ 338,000 miners.

The proposals to increase the minimum day wage rate to $6.50 and reduce working hours from a 7-hour day, 5-day week were among 17 presented to 300 representatives of management and labor.

They were offered by Philip Murray, vice president of the union, as the basis for negotiating a new agreement to supplant the two-year contract expiring March 31.

The opertors deferred their reply until tomorrow. Some said the proposals were the most sweeping in memory. One operator said they would add at least 52 cents a ton to the cost.

Murray asserted that since 1937 machines have displaced 29,000 men in the industry.

The conference elected Walter L. Robison, of Cleveland, chairman, and Thomas E. Kennedy, secretary. Kennedy is secretary-treasurer of the mine workers and former Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

ORIOLES AGAIN BEAT ROVERS, 1 TO 0

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There is a slight difference of about $6,500 in the $20,000 salary Buck Newsom is demanding and the figure the St. Louis Browns have quoted him, so we see by the papers that the big fellow has decided to let the Browns shift for themselves. He has packed his extra shirt and quit San Antonio for his Hartsville, S. C., farm.

POVICH

Before he walked out on the Browns, however, Newsom took pains to have it known that he was walking out. Usurping the club owner's prerogative of issuing printed statements, unblushing Buck issued one himself, in which he said, plainly, "I'm worth more than what the Browns are offering me." But in a postscript he left the gate open to further negotiations by the Browns, stating "P. S. Always a hard worker, trying to win, a fair country pitcher, a good hitter that won 20 games for a club that won only 55, can be reached by telephoning Hartsville 437."

The $13,500 the Browns are offering Newsom is not exactly a starving wage for six months work and no cause for fans to tumble over themselves in protest, but there is a suspicion that the Browns are not doing right by little Buck nevertheless. According to the scale of pay in the big leagues, he's entitled to most of the $20,000 he asks.

20 Games Out of 55

Newsom has a powerful argument when he cites the fact that he won 20 of the 55 games the Browns succeeded in winning last season. From those figures it appears that when Newsom wasn't winning games for the Browns last year, the Browns were winning precious few ball games. And in many respects Newsom's was the outstanding pitching performance in the American League last season.

Accepted as tops among the American League pitchers in 1938 was Red Ruffing, ace of the Yankee staff. And why? Because Ruffing turned in more victories than any other pitcher in the league. He turned in 21. Yet Newsom, with an eighth-place club, won only one game fewer than Ruffing. It's not difficult to get the picture of Newsom winning at least 25 last year were he supported by the offensive might of the Yankees.

To the added credit of big Buck is the fact that during a third of the season he was pitching with a broken thumb suffered in the service of the Browns. Yet in a day when big league pitchers are complaining from everything ranging from imaginary sore arms to incipient hangnails, Newsom never asked for a respite. There were times when he could scarcely grip the ball, but he was pitching and winning.

The curse of Newsom is that he happens to be with the Browns, a club that has been in the red for the most part of 15 years. They simply can't afford to pay high salaries. Yet it is not hard to visualize the Browns of last season without Newsom or the Browns of 1939 without Newsom. They would have been the joke club of the league last year and this season they will be sure-fire set-ups sans the only pitcher who could win consistently for them.

Browns Played for Him

Baseball men however, are not as eager to accept Newsom's pitching figures as the fans may be. They can be meaningless. There is such a thing as a pitcher being able to win for a poor team and unable to win for a good club. When Newsom went to the mound for the Browns on any given afternoon last year, the pressure was off. The Browns weren't going anywhere, didn't have a chance even for the first division, and the game was largely unimportant. How would Newsom have pitched if he had been under constant pressure? Baseball men are not willing to admit that he would have won 20 games or even 15.

They point out that he was no ball of fire when he was with the Washington club for two years and with the Red Sox for the best part of two. In those seasons a superlative pitching performance by big Buck might have made pennant contenders out of the Nats and the Red Sox, but Newsom was not even a consistent winner. His reputation as a good pitcher had been achieved with the lowly Browns before he went to Washington, and it may be significant that his brilliant season of last year was also achieved with an eighth-place club. Can he win for a winner? It sounds easy, but he hasn't proved that he can.

Maybe He's Real Holdout

Big Buck is just stubborn enough—or it may be sheer pride—to provide baseball with its first violent holdout since 1932 when Cliff Bolton refused to report to the Nats until July. The only other serious holdout in the American League is Earl Averill, the Indians' outfielder, who is balking at a $6,000 cut. Averill batted .330 until August 1, and .220 thereafter and the Indians have soured on him.

The Yankees have come up with a pair of holdouts in Red Rolfe and Frankie Crozetti who have showed no willingness to sign, but the Yankees have a way of bringing their players into the fold. They beat down the resistance of Red Ruffing two years ago and last year Joe DiMaggio finally capitulated. Yankee holdouts don't want to miss that $6,000 cut of the world series that has come to be an annual dividend of Yankee players. At least Newsom knows he isn't missing out on any world series cut if he doesn't sign.

On the Line
With Considine

New York, March 14.—As galling a bad break as mortal man ever absorbed came unto Tony Galento today when—with the first founts of bock beer flowing from the nation's taps—he was ordered to prepare himself for an almost unprecedented physical examination.

CONSIDINE

This cruel turn of fate, comparable to snatching a cup of water from a bon vivant in hades, was inflicted on the great heavyweight challenger by the New York athletic commission. There was no direct ban on bock by the boxing solons. But they made it clear that if Tony is not in "perfect physical condition" next Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock, when he undergoes his examination, that there will be no Louis-Galento fight. At least in New York.

There was a mild dissension among the slug solons as to what constitutes "perfect physical condition." Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, who testily told reporters that if they kept quoting Commissioner Bill Brown and Commissioner D. Walker Wear it would lead the public to ask, "Why don't that fat-head Phelan say something sometime?" Said he would leave it up to the commission doctors. Brown wanted to be a little more specific.

"Just a minute," he interrupted, leaving the general dangling from a hung participle, "I think you ought to make it plain, general, that Galento will have to be organically sound, before we okay him."

Bill Brown "Clears It Up"

This resulted in some general confusion, there being few ounces of medical knowledge among the commissioners and assembled press. So, later, Brown cleared it up a little. "I mean here," he said, tapping his heart. Only time will tell what effect the snatching away of a schooner of bock beer will have on the heart of Galento. Few men have ever been asked to absorb that kind of heart-break, for art.

Brown is of the not-too-revolutionary opinion that Galento is a bum, but if the doctors put their stamp of approval on the water buffalo's thick hide, Brown will vote yea for the fight to be held in New York. You can be sure, too, that Bill will make more than one trip to Galento's training camp, when and if it is opened in this region, to see that the great man pursues the life of an Eagle Scout.

This is an excellent safeguard, for it means that the fight public will be protected far beyond the manner to which it is accustomed. The commission was wise in ordering the examination, and Brown will be acting in the best interest of the fans when, and if, he polices Tony's camp. Bill isn't wrong very often. He came in for a lot of abuse when he called Max Baer a bum before the Carnera fight, but as it turned out he was guilty only of understatement and later admitted he should have called both of them bums.

Ring Solons' Doctors Will Watch Tony

The boxing solons will use their own doctors to look over Galento. Tony has a couple of doctors who say he is a physical marvel, and who okayed his fighting so soon after being floored (for the only time in his life) by what he later termed "bronx'ial ammonia."

The decision to use only the commission's spade-bearded experts is based on the trouble encountered a few years ago when the commission doctors said that Braddock was in condition to defend his title against Max Schmeling, and Braddock's doctors said that he had as nasty-looking a little finger, on his jabbing duke, as medical science ever shuddered over. The argument got completely beyond the depth of the commission and the experts, and the upshot of it all was that Schmeling was given the old heave-ho out of the title picture, which was the primary purpose of the entire debate.

Joe Jacobs, who has a contractural grip on Galento's nose ring, has no qualms over his man's ability to pass the physical test with flying colors. "When Tony goes down to the commission next Tuesday, they'll see the finest physical specimen they ever laid eye on," Jacobs swore after today's meeting.

"Who's he taking down with him, Weismueller?" a rude reporter asked. But Jacobs, who is back in the chips again, went on happily, "Don't worry about Galento. He'll be in the greatest shape of his life for this one. He is now. He won't even have to work out this week, before the examination, except for a little handball."

Action Like This Caused Overtime Period in Last Night's Oriole-Rover Match

Tuten Scores Winning Goal In Overtime

Baltimore Sextet Collects Lone Tally at 9:10 of Extra Period

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With another story-book finish the Baltimore Orioles made it two in a row over the champion New York Rovers last night at Riverside Stadium, nosing out the Eastern League champions by a 1-0 margin in an overtime match before an approving audience of 5,200 fans.

It was Audley Tuten, hard-skating, free-swinging defenseman who propelled the winning marker into the cage at 9:15 of the extra period, marring what otherwise had been a perfect evening for Harold Mitchell, Rover Goalie. Doug Fritz and Norman Calladine received credit for assists on the play, which culminated a wild melee in front of the New York net.

Even Tuten's match-winning shot was almost shut-off by Mitchell, who dropped to his knees in a vain attempt to ward off the score. Immediately before the clever Rover goalie had blocked a scoring try authored by Norman Calladine, high scorer of last week's match, apparently ending the Oriole threat. But Fritz took the rebound, faked a shot, and slipped the puck to Tuten who drove it by Mitchell with unerring aim.

Only 3 Penalties

The match was uncommonly free of fouls, as only three penalties were called all evening, all minor infractions. But it was evident from the outset that both teams were playing for "keeps." Ned Vitarelli, Baltimore's lightweight right-winger, was involved in two mix-ups that almost incited open warfare, and the body checking and battles for loose pucks were more vigorous than those displayed last week.

Raoul LeMat, director of the Riverside rink, did an excellent job of converting what had been a nice pond as late as 5 p. m., into a fast skating surface at game time, and the boys took full advantage of the speedway. Baltimore, currently leading in the Walker Cup series by one goal, set the pace all the way, and only Mitchell's brilliant work prevented at least two additional scores. He made 27 saves in regulation time, and six in the overtime, stopping 4 with his hands.

Kelly, of Baltimore, gave another good defense exhibition, but stopped only 18 potential scores, as his mates intercepted innumerable New York marches a goodly distance from the net. George Boll and Frank Ripley, who escaped serious injury despite bad falls and collisions with the sideboards, were outstanding for the victors, not only breaking up several Rover drives, but arranging the trappings with excellent stickwork for several scoring tries that narrowly missed.

Geschi Outstanding

Red Geschi, who bore a striking resemblance to the heavyweight fighter, Red Burman, twice went the length of the ice for New York with the puck, skimming along like a fancy-figure skater, only to lose his scoring chance because of alert Oriole defensemen. Mitchell Pechet also turned in a nice bit of skating, but it produced no score.

Both teams were teeing off late in the third period trying to score from long range, but this modus operandi was as ineffective as their short shots from close in.

The Atlantic Sea Gulls will be imported Tuesday night to meet the Rovers in the third and final exhibition of the season.

'Big Train' Named Nats' Commentator

Ex-Mound Ace Succeeds Arch McDonald; Will Go to Camp, Get Acquainted, As Predecessor on WJSV Leaves for N. Y.

Shy, retiring Walter Johnson, the most popular player ever to wear a National uniform, last night was appointed sportcaster for all Washington games this season, succeeding rotund Arch McDonald, who resigned to accept a similar position in New York.

Johnson's appointment followed an exclusive story published in The Post Sunday morning, which predicted his selection. In making known his choice, A. D. (Jess) Willard, general manager of Station WJSV, which will put the games on the air, said he was satisfied that Johnson was the logical man to take the place vacated by McDonald, and confident that he would give the fans accurate and colorful descriptions of the games.

McDonald is scheduled to leave for New York the latter part of this week. He will broadcast all home games of the Yankees and Giants. Johnson will entrain for Washington's training camp at Orlando late this week, to familiarize himself with new faces on the squad and size up Washington's chances in the American League race. He will be in the WJSV booth for the opening game.

Broadcasted Often

Johnson, who was selected over three veteran radio men for the role, is no stranger to the microphone. He has been interviewed frequently and also has conducted programs. In 1937 the "Big Train" accepted a two-week engagement as guest announcer for a Chicago station and was so well received he remained three weeks.

Active in business here since severing connections with baseball, Johnson will retain his business and political affiliations. A commissioner of Montgomery County, he would not accept the new position until assured by his fellow workers that they had no objections.

Helen Dettweiler Wins Low Net Prize

Aiken, S. C., March 14 (U.P.).—Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., today scored a low net of 71 to win the Kickers Handicap, preliminary to start tomorrow of the third annual Aiken Woman's golf tournament.

Mrs. Opal Hill, Kansas City, Mo., was second with 72.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, Washington, and Mrs. Jesse C. Andrew, West Point, Ind., tied for low gross score with 72 each.

Mrs. Myron Davey, Washington, had 81.

Mulroe Rolls Near Record Game of 205

Veteran PWA Bowler Scores Third Highest Mark Recorded in D. C.

Small and thin Joe Mulroe, for years just another good bowler, carrying a 110 average in the PWA League, went berserk on the Chevy Chase alleys last night to spill the duckpins for a 205 game, third highest on record in the District, and a 430 set, establishing two league marks.

The 42-year-old veteran, who formerly starred with Al Works, first local man ever to roll a 200 game; Glen Wolstenholme and Hap Burntner, on the old Convention and Arcadia teams, started his string with a triple-header strike, spared in the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh boxes, struck in the eighth and ninth and then tapered off with a last-frame nine.

Despite Muroe's great performance his Accounts teammates were unable to post high game of the night, although they did sweep 9

Baltimore Lad Elected Harvard Hockey Pilot

Cambridge, Mass., March 14 (AP).—William C. Coleman, jr., of Baltimore, was elected captain today of the Harvard varsity hockey team for the 1940 season, succeeding Austin Harding.

Coleman, a junior, played a defense position this season and also won his letter as a substitute guard on the football team. His father is a member of the Harvard class of 1905.

St. John's Five Tops McKinley, Gains Finals

Eastern Quint Beats Gonzaga in Met. School Cage Tourney

By Bill Burnett.

St. John's High, defending champion of the city's schoolboy cage teams, plugged up a leaky defense midway of a game with McKinley High last night, and managed to advance to the finals of the Metropolitan Scholastic Tourney with a 29-24 victory. Eastern was the class of the opening semifinal tangle, at Tech gym, blasting a fighting but inexperienced five of Gonzaga to a 33-20 defeat.

Once more it was the rest at the half that seemed to revive the crimson-clad Johnnies. Through the first two periods of the game Tech's Mighty Midgets worked efficiently on the Johnnie goal to hold a 16-12 lead. Eli Blank was the hero of the half, smearing 8 points past the desperate guarding of Joey Gallagher to take honors for the first two quarters, while Blank's teammate, Moe Tannebaum, limited Gallagher's prolific scoring to a single field goal, though the latter kept his head up with five foul efforts.

Scoring Spree

Then began St. John's winning scoring spree. After much scrambling around both goals, during which a wild pass and a missed setup were registered against the Johnnies, the basket was finally found and 10 points fell to St. John's before Tech scored again.

At the third quarter St. John's was ahead, 24-18, and wild shooting on Tech's part failed to hurt the advantage. With three minutes remaining, St. John's went into a stall session which was good enough to keep Tech from under its basket the rest of the game.

Eastern was up against a dogged, but sadly off-stride Purple club. Through two periods Gonzaga hung to the coattails of the rolling White Tide, behind only 10-7 after one quarter and 19-14 at the half. Then the shots of Ralph Lassise, and "Soup" Hancock began hitting the ring, and the Tide held a 29-18 advantage going into the last session. Gonzaga scored only 2 points in the final session.

Freddy Rice Standout

Freddy Rice, slim forward of the Purple, was far and away the best for the team, his 7 points pacing the scoring attack and his defensive work placing second to none. Gonzaga, as might be expected, missed the services of its tallest player, Lane O'Donnell, center, who was taken ill shortly before the game. Though seven men shared in Eastern's point scoring, the best total was registered by "Soup" Hancock, with 7.

Joe Gallagher, of the winning St. John's five, was high man for the night with 13 points, but Blank, of Tech, was close behind with 11. Eastern and St. John's, who met last year for the city title, come together tonight at Tech in the finals of the Star-sponsored tourney. Montgomery Blair High girls meet Mount Rainier girls in the preliminary at 7:30 for the feminine crown.

Cal Griffith, Cambria Battle for Castoffs

Joe, Nat Scout, Finds 'Em but Young Cal Has the Edge—Because He Can Get Rich 'Uncle's' Ear

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—Each eyeing the other suspiciously, and both buzzing about the Nats' camp like a pair of chicken hawks ready to swoop down and bear off the surplus talent—that's the picture as Joe Cambria and Calvin Griffith frequent the daily workouts of the Washington club.

Cambria, the Nats' lone scout and operator of several minor league clubs in the Washington farm system, and young Griffith are waging a merry duel for the Nats' overflow talent. And at this writing young Griffith has the edge.

Young Griffith, president-manager of the Nats' Charlotte, N. C., team, has a terrific advantage over Cambria in this battle for talent. As the adopted son and pet of the Nats' owner, he has the ear of Uncle Clark Griffith and yesterday he pried nine rookies loose from the Nats.

Whereupon Cambria squawked loudly, pointing out that his scouting expeditions had produced most of the young talent claimed by Griffith for Charlotte, and pointing out furthermore that his Springfield club in the Eastern League was sadly in need of talent.

So the Nats' owner today appeased Cambria by consenting to send First Baseman Jimmy Bernon, Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth and Outfielder Douglas Dean to Springfield.

Cambria Is Happy

Thus Cambria was appeased, but he was not completely satisfied. Among the players he did not get for Springfield was Morris Aderholt, the promising second baseman that he had dug up at Wake Forest College last summer. Aderholt went to Charlotte.

And thus far, Cambria has not gained title to a single pitcher. Six of the nine young players claimed by Calvin Griffith yesterday were pitchers, the cream of the second-flight rookies, and Cambria finds himself short on hurlers to man his Springfield, his Shelby and his North Carolina clubs.

"They are leaving me a lot of seaweed," protested Cambria in his picturesque language. What he felt like adding was that he wished he had a rich uncle, like Calvin Griffith has. A rich uncle who is in the baseball business.

The three players who will go to Cambria—Vernon, Bloodworth and Dean—will not be dismissed by the Nats until April 1, but young Griffith is expected to take his nine players to Charlotte for spring training within the next week.

Budge, Perry Play Tonight At Md. U. Gym

Rivals Arrive Early Today; Mangan, Noted D. C. Player, Referee

Don Budge, undisputed king of the professional realm following his usurpation of Ellsworth Vines, tonight will attempt to extend his rule over Fred Perry, one of his most troublesome subjects and the former world's amateur titleholder, in two out of three sets at the University of Maryland. The three-match card will start at 8:15 o'clock.

Carrot-topped Donald, the only "grand slam" winner in simonpure history, is now sweeping aside the Britisher Perry even more easily than he routed Vines in their coast-to-coast swing and spectators tonight will probably see the game's greatest player at his absolute peak.

Leading Perry 3 up, Budge has been showing capacity crowds in New York, Boston and Philadelphia the fastest serves and cannonball placements he has ever delivered, and on most nights the lanky Californian is described as the closest thing to unbeatable. Evidence of that was his 22 victories in 30 matches with Vines, who previously had been recognized as perhaps the finest netman of all time.

Perry came into national fame a few years ago, winning the American and British championships en route to the world's crown. This will be his fourth appearance in the Ritchie Coliseum, where he never has failed to please the crowd. As an amateur, Perry defeated Budge four times in six meetings, triumphing in the British, American and Davis Cup play.

Budge and Perry will be interviewed at 4 o'clock this afternoon on Arch McDonald's "Grab Bag" program on station WJSV.

Bobby Grayson Quits Stanford Grid Post to Enter Oil Business

Former All-America Helped Indians Beat S. M. U. in Rose Bowl

Palo Alto, Calif., March 14 (AP).—Robert H. "Bobby" Grayson, Stanford's great fullback of 1933, '34 and '35, has resigned as assistant football coach at Stanford, Dr. Thomas A. Storey, director of athletics, said today.

Dr. Story said Grayson will enter a three-months school with an oil company with the expectation of advancing to a good position.

Grayson, All-American fullback, played with the mighty Indians that defeated Southern Methodist University, 7-0, on New Year Day in 1936.

Since graduating he has held the position as assistant coach.

It was not announced in what capacity Grayson will enter the oil business, but it was accepted that it would be in the retail department of a "well known" company.

Helen Vinson and Tennis Star Husband Back Together Again

HELEN VINSON

Dismissal Filed in Los Angeles on Their Pending Divorce Suit

Los Angeles, March 14 (AP).—Helen Vinson, screen actress, and Fred Perry, former world's amateur tennis champion, become reconciled, it became known today with the filing of a dismissal of their pending divorce suit.

The surprising reconciliation matched their unexpected marriage in Harrison, N. Y., September 12, 1935. They separated November 11, 1938. A month later the actress sued Perry for divorce on grounds of cruelty.

Miss Vinson's attorney said today the actress simply notified him she and Perry had decided to try married life again. Perry, former British Davis cup star, is on a professional net tour. He played Donald Budge at Philadelphia last night.

Two Suspended at Tropical Park on Horse Doping Charge

Levitt, Carr Set Down by Fla. Solons

Saliva Tests Reveal Broadkill Stimulated After Race Friday

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 14.—The Florida State racing commission today suspended Trainer J. Levitt and Groom Paul Carr after a saliva and urine test showed that the horse, Broadkill, had been stimulated last Friday after winning the first race at Tropical Park. Broadkill is owned by S. Schroeder.

The commission ordered Levitt and all horses trained by, or in his care, suspended indefinitely. Carr also was given the same suspension and denied privileges of all Florida tracks.

Recovering winning form that had been lacking in three previous starts this winter, J. B. Partridge's Major B. had entirely too much speed for the nine sprinters opposing him in the Daytona Beach Purse here this afternoon. A $19.70-for-$2 shot in the field of shifty platers, the gelding registered by a length under "Chuck" Charlton, stepping the six furlongs in 1:12 4-5.

Mrs. H. Good's Many Flags, a 50-to-1 shot, finished with rare courage to gain the place by a head over J. O. Whitlow's Forfend, another outsider. The River Divide Farm's Handiboy was a heavily backed fourth.

The combination of Seed and Meade proved of no help to the talent in the mile and a furlong sixth race. Seed followed the early pace closely, but when the result was flashed, Seed's No. 3 was not in the first three. White Hot, piloted by Wayne Wright, took the purse by a half length.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Tropical Park, March 14.

Dear Al: I received an interesting note from an ex-Benningite: "Why worry and write so much about Clocker Mike's whereabouts. Many people would be bettetr off had you been lost all winter. Your followers do not have enough kale to shoot craps for beads, so why worry and write so much about Mike. Is it just to occupy space? (Signed) Tired of it." Thanks for sending the note to me instead of the boss. But I will let Mike rest today and answer the mail. E. G.—Regardless of what you have read or heard elsewhere, Bowie opens on March 30. Yes, there will be a stake race that day—the Rowe Memorial Handicap, $5,000 added at six furlongs. Ima Turfan—Mrs. K. Weil owns the colt Buddy Rogers and he has been named for the Kentucky Derby. That's true, few horses named for famous stage persons have amounted to much. Bing Crosby, Buck Benny, Alice Faye are a few samples. They seldom get above the claiming ranks for some reason or another. Mac—Honey Cloud will be returned to Maryland by Trainer Whitey Abel and you can bet him at Havre de Grace. H. L. M.—Top Flight holds the record for the most money won as a 2-year-old, accounting for $219,000 in 1931, by winning seven straight. Domino, in 1855, won nine straight and has the second best cash record, with $170,890. Herbie—Dub was a 102-1 shot when he won at Laurel last fall. I thought for a while that you had Dub confused with Dip, another winner at that track. J. K. B.—The best string of consecutive victories hung up by Extermination was six. He won two handicaps at Windsor, took one each at Saratoga and Belmont and then returned to Canada to win at Woodbine. That was in the summer of 1920. He lost only one nose decision in his career, which was a factor in his popularity. He is still living over on Maryland's Eastern Shore. B. K.—Don't let anybody tell you Dade Park is a half-mile track. The oval is a mile and an eighth. It is located in Kentucky about 3 miles from Evansville. It is true that the grandstand is small, seating only about 4,000. P. McD.—An owner can't always give his horse a certain name. In most cases five or six are submitted and one of them is given the horse. Very few names with advertising angles are accepted.

BILL.

First race—Star of Padula will have Maurice Peters to do the booting in this sprint and the spot seems to be the right one despite the high assignment of 116 pounds. I look for this combination to take down the heavy money. Ideal Fungi and Oklab figure to be in the thick of contention.

Second race—Nine O'Two is highly regarded in this field and is another with a load to carry. Donso will be in the saddle and I'm going to string along. Holiday Tea has been busy and is seldom far out of it. Deserves attention in this company. Lady Hav gets featherweight.

Third race—Chief Council is a well-bred youngster and may take the measure of these maiden 2-year-olds. Equistar will have Meade aboard and is likely to be prominent. Diavolo Cliff for the minor award.

Fourth race—Icy Wind showed a fair effort recently and may be ready to down company of this sort. Tutticurio won after many tries and could come right back despite the fact that he is picking up weight. Charmed One is fit and is dangerous.

Fifth race—False Point and Meade looks like a worthy combination in this field. The route and the weight are right. Knight Gallant will be in there knocking. Your Buddy is better than rated and could surprise at long odds.

Sixth race—Sure Miss is tossed in with 104 pounds and will do a lot of running. I'm going to take my chances. Nicholas S. and Egress seem to have something on the others.

Seventh race—Prince Derek appears as good as anything in this field, a rather evenly matched affair. Young Ashcroft will do the hustling. Suntime and Irish Moon to account for the place and show.

Eighth race—Foxton has been scratching around for a spot and may be turned loose in this field. Alpenglow is fit as hands make horses and will be there or thereabouts. Brandon Prince seems headed for a money position.

Best bet—False Point.

Howard, Seabiscuit's Owner, Buys Galapas

Los Angeles March 14 (AP).—C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, 1938 handicap champion, and Kayak II, winner of the recent Santa Anita $100,000 handicap, has purchased Galapas from Townsend B. Martin, New York sportsman, Martin's trainer, Walter Burrows, said today.

The price for the 4-year-old son of Sir Gallahad II out of Tenting, was not announced. Galapas recently won a class D mile claiming race at Santa Anita.

Florida Turfmen Invent Own 'Fingerprint' System to Check Ringers

Acme Photos.

A system of "fingerprinting" thoroughbreds to guard against "ringers" has been inaugurated by Florida turfmen, and has been so successful other States are expected to adopt the idea. On the left the horse is being measured all the way across his back so that every point of his natural height may be recorded. On the right are the front and side-view picture of the horse, together with all of his measurements, which must be taken to the paddock by the patrol judge, who scrutinizes each entry and checks him against his card before each race. More than 2,000 horses have been indexed thus far

Point-to-Point Race Mar. 25 At Middleburg

Conditions Announced For Annual Event; Entrance Fee Is $5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 14.—Conditions were announced today for the annual Middleburg hunter point-to-point races, which will be held Saturday, March 25, as follows:

No horse which has raced under Jockey Club or National Steeplechase and Hunt Association rules during the two years prior to this race meeting shall be eligible; in judging horses for the bowl, contestants will be required to mount their horses without assistance, except in the case of the side saddle, and horses will be judged on manners, performance, form over jumps and across country and condition at finish; jumping, manners, pace and style will count 90 per cent; conformation, 10 per cent.

Horses must be shown in the bridle in which they are raced; in judging conformation no exception will be taken to hunting blemishes or technical unsoundness, provided there is no interference with the efficiency of the horse as a hunter, and allowance will be made for horses that are light in flesh due to hard hunting; riders must be acceptable to the committee, and no groom or paid servant will be permitted to ride in any of the classes; the committee reserves the right to refuse any entry, or to reject any rider, without stating any reason therefor; ladies are eligible to start in all races; the decision of the committee on all questions is final, without explanation; entrance fee is $5 in all classes, with post entries accepted at $10.

The entries will close Saturday, March 18. There will be three classes, lightweights, carrying a minimum of 150 pounds; middleweights, carrying a minimum of 175 pounds, and heavyweights, carrying a minimum of 250 pounds. The distance will be 5 miles more or less as the crow flies. The first race will be called at 1 p. m.

Warrenton Hunt Slated Saturday

Warrenton, Va., March 14.—The Warrenton Hunt closes the hunting season Saturday with its sixth annual point-to-point races. Capt. R. J. Kirkpatrick, secretary of the event, announces two races, an individual open race and a pair for lady and gentleman riders.

Expected to be included among the entries are Mrs. Howard Linn's French-bred Verquin, who won the ladies' race at the Piedmont point-to-point last Saturday at Upperville; Gerald B. Webb's Easy Mark, winner of the heavyweight race at the Piedmont meeting; Sobersides, Harry Worcester Smith's grand hunter; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Loro, an old show-ring campaigner, and many others.

Conditions for the races state that they are by invitation to members of a recognized hunt, for horses that have been hunted by their present owners at least six times during the current season. Entries must be ridden by owners or members of their immediate families.

Report Stagehand Injured, Will Be Retired for Year

Miami, Fla., March 14 (AP).—Although official confirmation was lacking, a well informed source tonight said Stagehand, mighty race horse which last year won the handicap and derby at Santa Anita, had bowed a tendon and would be retired for a year.

Stagehand has made two starts this year, both at Hialeah Park. In one he set a new track record and in the other, the $50,000 added Widener Handicap on the track's closing day, he came in a disappointing third, behind Bull Lea and Sir Damion.

Four Post-A. A. U. Tourney Games Slated Tonight

3 Unlimited Cage Scraps Scheduled

Bolling Field Quintet Plays Eckington A.C.; Y. M. C. A. Reds Play

If you like rough-and-ready sports, just put your 25-cent piece on the line and buy yourself a gander at one of the thrilling programs in the District A. A. U. championship basketball tournament, being staged at the Eastern High School gymnasium. Thrills are selling for a dime a dozen these nights as the city's best teams battle to escape elimination in the biggest basketball competition ever staged in this city.

Three unlimited class struggles and a 145-pound battle are scheduled tonight. Each of the games will have championship flavor and some of the hardest-fought basketball of the tournament is anticipated. Two games will involve Army fives. Bolling Field, now in the thick of the fight for the U. S. Government League title, will face the strong Eckington A. C. and Fort Washington's court representatives are due for trouble with Stouffer's Park and Dine.

The third unlimited clash should prove a sprightly affair. The Y. M. C. A. Reds will take on the Trans-Lux Hour Glass team in a struggle to earn the right to meet the Jewish Community Center on Saturday night. The "Y" team, sistership to the Blues who were downed by J. C. C. last Saturday night, aim to stay in the race and hope to avenge the defeat suffered by their club members.

Cremins in Action

For those who arrive at the battle scene early, there will be plenty of action in the 145-pound class when the Chevy Chase club tackles Epsilon Mu Sigma. The game will mark the first tournament appearance of Bob Cremins, one of the outstanding young players hereabouts. The Frat team hopes to make this Cremins' final appearance, too. The 16-year-old lad has averaged better than 15 points a game this season, mostly against unlimited class opposition.

Bolling Field also will present a scoring sensation in Joe Zwisle, a forward who has been a potent factor in the fine season experienced by the Aviators. Zwisle is a half-pint forward with cat-like ability to work the ball into position for a shot. He has an eagle eye that has brought him 284 points to lead the U. S. Government League in scoring. This circuit includes FBI and other crack teams so Zwisle hasn't been picking on "cripples."

Zwisle will get plenty of help from Fred Govedich and Ray Hager, who have put up strong games for Bolling Field all year. But despite the array of star talent in the Aviators' line-up, the Eckington A. C. is confident of turning them back.

Dapper Dan Plays

Friday's card will mark the start of the second round for the unlimited teams, with two of the tournament favorites slated to see action. Dapper Dan, now sponsored by the United Typewriter Co., takes on the York Haberdashers while Delaware & Hudson meets the Merrick Boys Club. Two teams who won after hard fights will clash head-on in another game when Greenbelt A. C., led by Johnny Bozek, faces the Interior Department five with its array of Indian players. The Merrick and Alexandria Boys Club fives clash in a 135-pound game that opens the program.

On Saturday, another of those 12-game schedules will be conducted. Teams in the 90, 105 and 120-pound classes will play eight games during the afternoon session at which an admission price of 10 cents will be charged. At night, the program will be featured by the battle of the Jewish Community Center and the winner of the Y. M. C. A.-Trans-Lux Hour Glass game. On the same night, the Hyattsville and United Typewriter Girls play.

I. D. R. A. Cagers Beat PWA, 47-31

"Chief" Paul Ray, captain of the Indian team of the I. D. R. A. Basketball League, led his squad of First Americans to a 47-31 victory over PWA last night in the final game of a playoff for the Interior crown, the triumph coming in the final minutes of play when Ray and his mate, "Fleetfoot" Tim Ironteeth, ran up the top-heavy count.

A capacity crowd filed into the Interior gym for the closely contested battle. Though on even terms for the first 15 minutes of the game, the Redskin aggregation jumped into a 21-17 lead shortly before halftime. PWA was a constant threat until the spree of Ray and Ironteeth. Individual honors went to Konopka, of the losers, who tallied more than half his team's total, 19.

A trophy will be presented the winners in token of their triumph.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

You know there are some fellows who plank their whole income tax down today like it was leavings from a tannery.

We make ours in four easy payments like taking out a tooth through your ear. Just sprinkle on a little nutmeg and serve.

This is really the most patriotic day of the year. Bands should be playing, flags should be flying and the recruiting sergeant should be around with a vacuum cleaner.

14 Bouts Listed On A.A.U. Ring Card Tonight

Annual Title Meet Moves Into 3d Week; Colbert Featured

A colorful field of young gladiators, prospective champions all, will resume their quest for District A. A. U. titles tonight at Turner's Arena, where the amateur tournament moves into its third week of fisticuffing with a program of 14 bouts. Although novice bouts dominate the card, a full evening's entertainment is guaranteed by the youngsters who are groomed to perfection for the big event.

One of the outstanding contenders scheduled to perform is Billy Colbert, 126-pounder, representing the Washington Boys Club, who is serving his apprenticeship in the ring. Colbert won the club junior wrestling championship at the tender age of 13, but abandoned the mat for the ring, and is making a determined bid for the title. Colbert is running neck and neck with young Kenny Swann, all-around athlete from the Merrick Club, for the honor of the outstanding novice in the tourney.

Swann, incidentally, is rated one of the best athletes ever turned out at Merrick. Tom Gearty, former three-letter man at Catholic University, who directs the clubs, says the boy is a natural athlete, and one of the best for his years he ever has laid eye on.

New York Boxers Dominate 'Gloves'

New York, March 14 (U.P.).—New York boxers won three of the eight titles at stake in the Golden Gloves tournament of champions before a crowd of 15,735 in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Philadelphia, which had placed four men in the title round after 16 semifinal fights earlier in the evening, won only two championships.

The New York team scored 22 points, figured on the basis of five for a championship, three for a runner-up and one each for the two losers of semifinal bouts in each division. Philadelphia was second with 18 points and Charlotte, N. C.; Jersey City and Newark, N. J., tied for third with six each.

Plays Tonight in Post Tourney

BOB CREMINS, star forward of the Chevy Chase five who scored 371 points this year in 19 games. He piled up 33 points against an unlimited club this season in his best single effort. His club meets the Epsilon Mu Sigma team in a 145-pound class game

Galento Expects To Pass Test in N. Y.

'Beer Barrel' Must Take Exam Before Getting License To Meet Louis in June Bout

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 14.—Two-ton Tony Galento, the beer barrel that walks, will have to prove his physical soundness before New York State's august athletic commissioners give their blessing to his heavyweight title battle with Joe Louis in the Empire State.

The three commissioners, listening to a request from Promoter Mike Jacobs for permission to stage the scrap here, ruled today that first the Newark nightstick will have to apply for a boxer's license in New York and then will have to undergo a strict physical examination to determine whether he is in the proper condition for such a test.

"Should he pass that test," the commission said, "we will approve the bout."

The commission-indicated doubt over Tony's physical makeup didn't sit at all well with his manager, Jabberin' Joe Jacobs, but despite his hurt feelings at the fistic fathers' attitude, Joe announced he would have Galento apply for the license immediately, and would have his box pride and joy appear for the examination next Tuesday.

"How do you like that?" Joe shouted from around his cigar. "After Tony was sick last year, his personal physician, Dr. Joseph Higi, of Orange, N. J., examined him weekly until he was sure he was back in shape. Other doctors have examined him twice since then, and he was examined by commission doctors in St. Louis, Minneapolis, Philadelphia and Miami before each of his fights in those places since then.

"Just you wait—the commission will see him next week and they'll never find a better specimen of physical manhood."

Delhuds and FBI In Title Scrap

A trip to the Liverpool (Ohio) sandlot basketball tournament will hinge tonight on the outcome of the second playoff game between Delaware & Hudson and Federal Bureau of Investigation. The teams, battling for the championship of the Heurich Amateur Cage League, will meet in the feature of a triple-header at Heurich gymnasium, the first game starting at 7:30 p. m.

Delhud has the inside lane on the title and the trip that goes with it, having bounced FBI in the playoff opener, 30 to 24. FBI, however, will be putting all it owns into tonight's game, hoping to send the series into the third game.

Each team boasts an outstanding floorman and scorer, Delaware & Hudson looks to elongated Hal Keisel, 6-foot-6 center, for most of its points, while the G-Men depend on Jim Thompson, forward.

St. Martin's and Hot Shoppes meet in the curtain-raiser, and United Typewriter plays Alexandria B. C. in the second clash of the double preliminary.

C. C. Girls' League Play-off Tomorrow

The play-off game between Agriculture, champion of the Community Center Government League and United Typewriters, champion of the Community Center Civic League, will be staged at McFarland gym tomorrow night.

Following the game the winning girls will be presented with a handsome trophy by The Washington Post while each team will be given trophies, emblematic of their supremacy in their respective leagues, by Mrs. Elizabeth Giles, tournament director.

G. U.'s Joe Murphy On All-Star Five

Lanky Joe Murphy, Georgetown University's captain and leading scorer, was awarded a position on the first team of the Eastern Basketball Conference squad, picked by the conference coaches, the Associated Press announced yesterday.

Murphy was paired at forward with Ed Straloski, Pittsburgh. Robert Stark, Carnegie Tech captain and the conference's top point-getter, was placed at center, and Edward Boyle, Temple, and Harry Lothes, West Virginia, at guards.

Only other Georgetown players mentioned were Johnny Schmitt, fleet guard, who was named to the second team, and Johnny McGowan, sophomore center, who received honorable mention.

Dallas Heavy Makes Debut Here

The supporting card for the Lou Gevinson—Pete Galiano bout, which headlines Monday night's program at the Arena, was announced last night by Matchmaker Goldie Ahern—with a small bow of pardonable pride.

Ahearn admittedly is off the "name" standard, but has arranged a card that promises to produce sufficient action and bloodshed to satisfy the most exacting customer. All of the prelims will be over the four-round distance.

Johnny O'Brien, of Dallas, makes his debut against Jake Friedman, of Baltimore, in a heavyweight joust. Billy Save, of Baltimore, tackles Johnny Pickeral, of Roanoke, former Virginia amateur champion; and another bout brings together Dixie Cornbred, of Durham and Battling Zuzu colored light-heavyweights.

Pee Wee Landers, Oxon Hill favorite, will appear against Red Transparenti in the last preliminary, which probably will precede the main bout.

D. C. G-Man 2d In Pistol Meet

Tampa, Fla., March 14.—G-Man Walter Walsh, of Washington, started out his 1939 outdoor pistol competition by placing second in the first event of the national mid-winter pistol championships opening here today. His score of 189 for the .22-caliber show fire event was only good for second when Pat Baldwin, Miami officer, set a new record of 193 for the course. The Washington Metropolitan Police team is also firing in the tournament.

Menke Appointed A. U. Grid Coach

The last remaining vacany in the American University athletic department was filled yesterday when George Menke, 31-year-old Washington-born man and captain of C. U.'s eleven in 1930, was appointed head football coach.

For the last five years Menke had served as assistant to Gus Welch, who has resigned, and his predecessor, Walter Young.

Fort Myer's Final Indoor Show Tonight

Battle for Points To Decide Winners Of Tri-Color Awards

Fort Myer's final indoor horse show of the winter series opens in the post riding hall tonight with the hunter, jumper and student championships still virtually anybody's race.

This show, the third to count in the tricolor awards, finds a number of likely horses in each division running neck and neck in the battle for points. In the jumper division Smacko, with Lieut. Charles McClelland up, is tied with Broomfield, Capt. Kenneth Hoge's consistent bay gelding, each with 4 points.

Close behind the leaders is Fred Hughes, jr.'s Ringmaster, former circus performer, which has risen from the ranks of horsedom to defeat some old timers in the horse show game. Ringmaster schooled around the stiff handicap course for tonight's event with one-half a fault, proving that he will not be on the outside looking in when the championship rosettes are passed around.

Close Battle

Ringmaster and two Government horses, Chance Me and Bumper, have 3 points apiece, with Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, and the Army's Red Cloud following close behind with 2 points. A ribbon in either the "aerial express," which is a fault-and-out event, or in the class for handicap jumpers would almost assure any one of the present point holders a firm grasp on the championship ribbon. However, if an outsider scores in these two classes the award will still be up in the air.

In the hunter division, Margaret Cotter's Rocksie and Jane Kromer's Jinwich are tied in first place with six points. Reliance, James Hechtor's Baltimore entry, is tied for second with Capt. John Meade's good mare, Dansoux. Both Jinwich and Dansoux are working under a handicap at this show, for they were raced in last Saturday's Potomac Hunt point-to-point and may not be feeling in top form.

Schmitt Named G. U. Court Leader

Schmitt, whose home is in Syracuse, succeeds Joe Murphy, a June graduate.

Md. Releases Spring Sports Schedule

Terps Have 37 Home Events—54 in All; Starts With Baseball

By Jack Munhall.

Perched on the giddy heights of one of its most successful athletic years, despite a disappointing football campaign, the University of Maryland yesterday released an ambitious spring sports schedule of 54 events, 37 at home, for the baseball, lacrosse, track and tennis squads.

Conceded an excellent chance of adding the diamond crown to their Southern Conference boxing championship, runner-up honors in the basketball tournament and prominence in the recent indoor track games, the Terps are preparing for 24 contests, 16 at College Park.

The lacrossemen, always a formidable national title threat at the pastime of cracking heads, face six matches at Byrd Stadium and three on the road; the track team travels for two of seven meets, while the netmen will enjoy familiar surroundings for 7 of 13 matches.

Opens With Baseball

The schedule will be ushered in by baseball with Michigan, March 27, and out by baseball with Georgetown, May 20. Other highlights of the diamond card are games with Dartmouth, Ohio State and Navy in addition to Southern Conference rivals.

Dartmouth also graces a tough track slate. The lacrosse team again will tackle most of the country's outstanding powers, and the tennis crowd has a "suicide" assignment, meeting among other crack opponents, Navy, Georgetown, Michigan, Richmond and William and Mary.

While Coach Burt Shipley lost many of his best players by graduation he is confident of a baseball outfit at least as strong as the 1938 edition which won 12 of 20 starts against top-flight rivals. Waverly Wheeler, third base; Mike Surgent and Bill Bryant, outfielders, and Bill Wood and Bill Steiner have gone, leaving considerable gaps to be plugged.

Bowman is one of two newcomers scheduled to make their debut on the program. The other is Al Sparks, from Memphis, who faces Red Ryan in a 30-minute bout. Wild Man Zim and Paddy Mack are listed for another half hour of roughhouse.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

Some of our friends among the jewel traders of New York City seem to be quite unhappy over our remarks about the Oriental pearl and it's step-sister, the cultured pearl.

RUNYON

We said that the cultured pearl has hurt the market for the Oriental pearl, and this can scarcely be denied, but we did not mean that the cultured pearl is to be desired above the Oriental, which seems to be the way some of our jewel bartering friends interpreted us.

Why, that would be like saying that a copy of a piece of Paul Revere silver is preferable to the real thing. It might be an exact copy, but still it would be a copy, and while a copy is all right if you cannot get the real thing, we think there can be no argument as to the desirability of the two.

Only a Copy

It is true that the cultured pearl has been developed to an amazing degree of perfection, but one thing will always differentiate the Oriental pearl from the cultured and that is the word cultured. It means substantially the same difference as there is between any original and a copy, no matter how fine the copy, and it must be agreed that the cultured pearl is in the last analysis a copy of the Oriental.

Indeed, as young Mr. Milton Schepps, of Madison avenue, in New York City, one of our jewel-trading friends who takes up the cudgels for the Oriental, points out, if there were no Orientals, how could the cultures flourish and thrive? We take it his idea is that had it not been for the Orientals, no one would have ever known what a pearl is.

Business Rivals

This young Mr. Schepps is of the second generation of jewelry trading Scheppses in New York. We knew his father, Harry B., generally called Bob, when he first started out with a little hole-in-the-wall in Sixth avenue, near Forty-second street. That was a long time ago. Bob was a shrewd, rough-and-tumble tradesman in those days who regarded jewels as just something you bought as advantageously as possible and disposed of for as much profit as you could get.

He has never become entirely reconciled to the development in his son, Milton, of an esthetic regard for jewels that sees their beauty before taking account of their commercial value. So Bob has pretty much withdrawn to the life of a gentleman fisherman down on Long Island and lets Milton run the business. Sometimes he drops into the store and listens with a puzzled expression to Milton decanting on the glories of some bauble, just from the standpoint of beauty.

There were a number of Schepps in the jewelry trade in New York at one time, all brothers and all business rivals. You never knew what Schepps was speaking to another. Only Bob and Seaman Schepps are now left in the trade. Seaman is also in business on Madison avenue. We first knew

Capital Transit and Pot. Elec. Power Are Units in System

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 14.—North American Co., one of the Nation's largest public utilities holding companies, of which Capital Transit Co. and Potomac Electric Power Co. are units, reported today net income for 1938 of $15,109,007, equal to $1.55 a common share. This compares with 1937 net income of $18,502,480, or $1.93 a share.

James F. Fogarty, president, reported to stockholders the decline in earnings was mainly due to the business recession which began in the fall of 1937 and continued through the summer of 1938.

He continued: "Better business conditions in the fourth quarter of 1938, when our subsidiaries established new high records in electric output, have continued so far in 1939.

Phillips Petroleum

Net profit in 1938, after all charges and reserves, but before inventory adjustment, was $10,317,826.11, equal to $2.32 a share on all shares outstanding. Net profit in 1937 was $24,113,874.41, or $5.42 a share. At the end of 1938, income was charged with $1,268,703.89 to adjust inventories to market value because of a decline in prices during the last quarter. Net profit was thereby reduced to $9,049,122.22, or $2.03 a share. In the four years preceding 1938 market value of inventories was higher than reflected by the books but no adjustments increasing earnings were made.

Total gross income received, exclusive of intercompany business, and taxes collected on products sold, was $112,379,731.15, which was 6.5 per cent below the 1937 record high. Net operating income, before reserves, retirements and inventory adjustments, was $30,428,516.77, or $6.84 a share; it was $41,447,058.41, or $9.32 a share in 1937. Retirements and reserves for depreciation, depletion and intangible development costs were $20,110,690.66, or $4.52 a share, compared with $17,333,184, or $3.90 a share in 1937.

Dividends paid totaled $8,898,096, or $2 a share. In 1937 dividends were $12,234,882, or $2.75 a share. At the end of 1938 the company was in the strongest financial position in its history. Current assets were $10,717,643.76 more than at the previous year-end and totaled $56,562,787.46, of which $28,054,336.59 was cash. Stocks of crude and refined products were decreased 2,069,360 barrels during the year. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 4.38 to 1.

United Engineering

Pittsburgh, March 14.—George T. Ladd, president of United Engineering & Foundry Co., reports that 1938 net earnings were the second largest in the history of the company. Net income was $3,192,619 equal, after preferred stock dividends, to $3.82 per share of common stock outstanding. These net earnings were exceeded only by 1937, when net income was $4,043,644 equal, after preferred dividends, to $4.8[illegible] per share of common stock.

Dividends of $2.50 per common share were paid in 1938 which, with preferred payments, totaled $2,107,485.50. The surplus of the company was increased over $1,000,000 during 1938 and the total of earned surplus at the close of the year was $5,156,370 in addition to a capital surplus of $1,475,272. At the end of 1938 there were 8,252 shares of $100 par value preferred stock outstanding and 820,746 shares of $5 par value common stock.

Local Trade 3 Per Cent Under Normal

Standing on March 1 Is 5 Per Cent Lower Than February 1

Business in Washington showed a loss from the index for January, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by the research department of Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, New York and Detroit advertising firm. Business in Washington as of March 1 stood at 3 per cent below normal, a loss of 5 per cent from the standing on February 1. On March 1, 1938, the Washington business index stood at 11 per cent below normal.

"In addition to the 41 areas where gains were registered," the report states, "ten areas remained at their January levels. Business activity in 96 markets was slightly under the rate maintained during January. National business is now operating at 21 per cent below normal—a drop of 1 per cent under January."

Largest Gains

Prices Hold Despite European News
Coppers Rise on Chilean Developments
Czech Bonds Slump; Brazilians Active

New York, March 14.—Security markets, while dull and narrow, were steady in the face of the disturbing events in central Europe and the Presidential demand that Congress reinstate the $150,000,000 which the economy bloc recently removed from the relief bill. Czech liens broke sharply on small dealings in the bond section, where speculative rails continued their interrupted advance. Foreign exchanges held surprisingly well, particularly sterling which was under some pressure.

New evidence that the Chilean Senate or the Chilean President's veto will knock out the proposed export tax on copper gave support to that group of shares and tended to support stocks generally. Anaconda and Kennecott continued as active leaders showing gains in contrast with recent losses. The street rumors, later denied by the Federal Reserve Board, that margin requirements are to be relaxed, brought out no speculators but may have influenced some traders to hold rather than sell.

General motors report of foreign sales for February and the first two months, showing increases from a year ago, aided automotive descriptions. A number of the current crop of annual reports disclosed better-than-expected earnings and generally strong financial positions and business executives placed new emphasis on betterment of the outlook. Further announcement of price increases on oil products, while seasonal, acted to stiffen quotations in the petroleum group.

Utilities Yield

Utility shares eased on moderate selling, possibly because of proposals for a local municipal power project, chances for which appear remote. Aviations picked up and steels and stores gained some ground. Fluctuations in any group of stocks, however, were unusually narrow, the range of 100 active leaders for the day being only half a point, the close being 0.09 point higher. Of 759 issues traded, 295 advanced, 255 declined, and 209 were unchanged. Individual stocks which turned in good gains included Union Pacific, Steel common, Chrysler, Chesapeake & Ohio, Bethlehem Steel and Allied Chemical.

Hesitancy of buyers again could be traced to the confused picture at Washington where, despite reiterations that Government is making a bed of roses for business, indications point to stubborn retention of pet theories. For example, Wall Street cannot see how tax relief promises can be fulfilled when the House appropriation sub-committee adds $250,000,000 for farm aid and should Congress yield in the relief demand from the White House. Even those who are in sympathy with the President's request for $150,000,000 more relief and who do not suspect the 1940 election has anything to do with the Administration's amiable gestures toward business, are wondering if, perhaps, the more sweetly reasonable attitude in Washington may be accounted for by real worry at the sluggishness of recovery.

Official suggestion that adjournment of Congress should be soon, also has discouraged the hopefuls who not long since were certain that some really constructive tax revision and possibly modification of the objectionable features of the Wagner act would be effected at the present session.

Bonds Firm Except Czechs

Listed bond trading settled into a quiet routine today, with the undertone firm in all groups save the few issues directly concerned in the latest central European imbroglio. Czech government 8s of 1951 fell 8 points, and the 8s of 1952 dropped 14 points, on relatively small transactions. There is, of course, hardly any demand for such securities in the light of the fresh German encroachment and the reports that the Reich demands a share of the Czech gold and foreign exchange holdings.

The foreign dollar section was fairly active, with Brazilians still traded heavily. Fractional advances were recorded in Brazilian government bonds, but the State and municipal loans remained uncertain. Panama, Peruvian and Uruguayan bonds did well, but Colombians dipped. German and Polish bonds were in mild demand, but Italians were neglected. The highest rated foreigns were still maintained.

Wheat Prices Hit Near-Low For This Year

Large Crop in Sight
Weakness Overseas
Export Demand Lags

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 14.—Wheat values fell today to the lowest level since February 6, coming within ⅛ of equaling the lowest quotation on the grain market's blackboards so far in 1938.

Losses that amounted to as much as ½ cent reflected weakness of foreign markets, lagging international wheat demand and favorable crop reports from the domestic belt. Some quotations at Liverpool and Winnipeg were at new lows for the season but Chicago prices, holding 7 to 8 cents above those markets, were about 5 cents higher than the 1938-39 lows.

As far as prices were concerned, the grain markets here and abroad virtually ignored political developments in Europe with dissolution of the Czecho-Slovak state. Much attention was given European news, but it was difficult for traders to judge the ultimate economic effects of the situation.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ½ lower than yesterday: May, 67⅛@67⅜; July, 67½@67⅝; corn, ¼ to ½ down; May, 47⅞@48; July, 49½; oats unchanged to ¼ lower; rye, ¾ to 1 cent off; lard, 8 to 15 lower.

Dollar Buys 14.7% More Than in 1929

New York, March 14.—The average cost of living in the United States is now about 85.3 per cent of the 1929 level, according to the National Industrial Conference Board today. Items included in the estimates of the average cost of living are food, which accounts for about 33 cents of the wage earner's dollar; sundries, which account for 30 cents; housing, 20 cents; clothing, 12 cents, and fuel and light, 5 cents of each dollar. Clothing was the best buy in January, costing only 73.7 per cent of the 1929 figure. Food prices were also low, at 74.1 per cent of their 1929 level, while fuel and light cost 92 per cent, housing cost 93.7 per cent and sundries, 97.1 per cent.

C. I. T. Business 13% Above Year Ago

New York, March 14 (AP).—Business of Commercial Investment Trust Co., from January 1, this year, to March 7, was about 13 per cent better than in the same 1938 period, P. W. Haberman, vice president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. He said he believed the company had earned its dividend for the first quarter.

Universal Credit Co., a controlled subsidiary, which specializes in financing Ford sales, has contributed an estimated 50 per cent of C. I. T. earnings during recent years, Haberman said.

COLLATERAL LOANS

always welcomed on a sound basis

Owners of stocks and bonds often wish to raise temporary funds without sacrificing their holdings.

A collateral loan is the logical answer to this problem and American Security and Trust is always glad to make such loans on marketable securities.

If this type of loan would be of service to you, any of our officers will be glad to discuss it. We look upon collateral loans as an important function in the rounded credit facilities of a well-managed bank.

Free Basball School Here Saturday

Community Center To Hold Event for District Youngsters

Washington's prospective Ty Cobbs and Babe Ruths, youngsters from 12 to 16 years of age who have hopes of playing bigger and better baseball, will be given a boost on their way beginning Saturday at 10 a. m., when the Community Center Department stages the first class of its baseball school.

Roosevelt High and Walker diamonds will be the sites of the classes, to be conducted free of charge for boys within the age limits. For almost one month, until April 15, the classes will be held regularly at each stadium. Candidates for local high school teams will be welcome to enter, provided they obtain permission from their respective coaches.

Teachers will be chosen from the best possible material in the city. A fine pitching instructor has been selecated for Roosevelt classes, G. H. "Doc" White, physical director at Wilson Teachers College. White, it may be remembered, was a pitcher with Central High and Georgetown University, graduating from these institutions to do a turn with Chicago's famous "hitless wonders."

him years ago when he had a store in San Francisco and later in Los Angeles.

Seaman is a man of fine mind and the soul of an artist, always reaching for the stars. He still is, for that matter. The reaching used to get him in business difficulties. He once broke himself trying to establish a sort of Tiffany's over in Sixth avenue. He would rather design a masterpiece in jewels than make a big sale.

John Schepps, another brother, long dead, was something like that. John had a prosperous rotisserie but he liked to buy jewels and keep them just for the pleasure of looking at them. There is a member of the second generation of the Schepps family who is an Army officer and who was a great soldier athlete when he was at West Point.

Eagerly Sought

Well, that gets us back to young Mr. Milton Schepps and his letter about the pearls, cultured and Oriental. He points out that the ruby and the sapphire might be considered in peril at this time on the basis of the pearl argument, in view of the fact that science has made such strides in the art of imitating these jewels that even the expert has to turn to scientific devices to distinguish the genuine from the imitation.

However, he says that in spite of this, never before have real rubies and sapphires been so eagerly sought, and never before except possibly during the gold rush of the late 20s, have the gems been as costly. He says it is for the same reason that people who can afford it always want the best of everything and that nothing can take the place of the real thing.

We once heard an old time jewel trader say a good thing about imitations to a wealthy lady to whom he was trying to sell a first class emerald. He also showed her an imitation emerald of about the same size and cut as the real one, though of course the price of the imitation was nowhere near that of the genuine article. The lady said to him:

"I'm of a mind to buy the imitation. If I bought the real one, no one would know it is real, would they?"

"Yes, madam," the dealer said, quietly, "you would know it."

We suppose that is the way owners of oriental pearls feel about their gems. Maybe no one else knows they are orientals, but they know it.

On Fishing

There can no longer be any doubt that trouting days in Maryland are almost with us again. By the calendar, two full weeks, but according to trout fishermen, only a few days. They are in a dither, bringing flyrods from the attic and closet, overhauling kits, varnishing, and patching boots and waders. Neophytes are haunting the sports stores dazedly wondering just what kind of an outfit it takes to go with the strangely slim willowy rods so different from any they have ever before used, and using the same diffident attitude in taking questions, because they don't want to appear dumb, that they use in writing for advice as to equipment.

ACKERMAN

Letters are all too often lacking any indications as to the type of fishing to be followed, and the correspondence is lengthly before we can help even a little.

So, if readers will remember that and give full details, we won't have to go into a full explanation each time as to why a rod suitable for Virginia and Maryland streams isn't just the right one for Pennsylvania, New York and Northern waters. Why such a rod must be increased an ounce or two in weight if it is to be used later for bass and catfish, or several ounces if the general trend toward the heavier fishing with a flyrod is to be followed, as it is in

Farley's Plight

Postmaster General Farley, plagued about 1940, finds himself also beset now by baseball fans who want pictures of Abner Doubleday, Alexander Cartwright, Capt. Eddie Grant, Christy Matthewson or a dozen others on the baseball stamp that Mr. Farley long resisted but finally succumbed to in the persuasive environment of a baseball banquet in New York.

It involves as many problems as his hefty one of running or not running in 1940, for in this matter there are only 130,000,000 people to consider along with a big political machine. But in the problem of the baseball stamp, he is being called on to decide how a dozen famous faces, each with thousands of advocates, can be placed on one postage stamp that measures 1 inch by five-sixths of an inch.

Being no master at sleight-of-hand, Mr. Farley, it was said yesterday, has just about decided to use the picture of Abner Doubleday, who, in Cooperstown, N. Y., discovered the game of baseball. But since some authorities allege that the game was discovered by someone eles in some other town, Mr. Farley was also reported as considering putting a baseball diamond on the stamp. The question of whose baseball diamond to use may cause a later complication—but this is a matter of running bases before they are reached and there's no use of anticipating trouble for the P. M. General.

Anyhow, the stamp will be of a 3-cent denomination and probably will appear in early summer. The Postoffice Department said yesterday: "We are mulling with the idea of what is best to do."

GROWLS reach Washington from those remote and lonely lighthouse keepers who want their pay checks semi-monthly instead of monthly. The Lighthouse Service is not opposed to semi-monthly payments, but says it would require considerable additional clerical and office work that cannot be met without some augmentation of staff and it is not practicable to do this at the present time.

The service points out that the majority of lighthouse keepers are provided quarters with heat and light. They are favorably known in their communities and can put the general store on the cuff and the bee on the butcher and baker if necessary, the service said, in effect. Of course, if the lighthouse keeper doesn't want to traffic in credit, that's another problem that he can tie up with the semi-monthly check problem while looking out to sea.

THE Bureau of Biological Survey thinks its name a riddle that leaves the average American unresponsive to a great agency's work. If you don't know what the Bureau of Biological Survey does, because of the vagueness of the name, it is explained that it fosters conservation of American wildlife. The bureau people think the name should indicate that. Maybe they'd better keep quiet. Mr. Ickes is reported as out to get everything concerned with conservation and bring it under his roof and discipline. The Forest Service, thriving under Agriculture Department, is trembling now at the thought of moving uptown.

JOBS: Associate public health nursing consultant, $3,200; assistant, $2,600, Public Health Service. The top age limits are 45 and 40, respectively. Associate medical officer (general practice), $3,200, Veterans Administration. The doctor must'nt be over 40 years old. Consultant in child labor, and principal, senior, associate and assistant consultants in child labor, $2,600 to $5,600, Children's Bureau, Labor Department. All are civil service jobs.

A WPA worker in the Agriculture Department and the father of 14 children is in a hospital with pneumonia. His children can use clothing of practically all sizes. Some clothes have been donated by the department's personnel but many of these garments were practically in rags. Mrs. Helen Winfree, the department's welfare worker, will take contributions for the case.

Bob Burns Says—

It don't pay to be too hasty these days. Take them two men down in Alabama. They jumped on one another at the same time, drawin' knives, poundin', cuttin' and slashin'. After a terrible knock down an' drag out battle, they fell into a ditch an' lay there exhausted, lookin' into each other's faces. Then, both of 'em raised up an' cried, "Man, you ain't the man!" What a swell time to find that out!

Reminds me of the night I was expectin' to get egged off the stage in an amateur act an' someone smacked me in the eye with a grapefruit. Boy, was I sore! I didn't mind gettin' hit so much, but when I was all set for eggs, I wanted eggs! Besides, there's a lot of difference between grapefruit an' henfruit. It's not only how it tastes—but when you take it like I took it, it's how it feels!

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The Vanderbilt Cup team-of-four championship, which since it was organized by Harold S. Vanderbilt has been the peer of all bridge tournaments, will be held this year the week of April 17.

Blue Ribbon Bridge Tournament

This year it will be held at the Shelton Hotel, Lexington Avenue and Forty-ninth Street. The schedule is as follows:

Qualifying sessions—Monday and Tuesday evenings, April 17-18.

First knockout round—Wednesday evening, April 19.

Second knockout round—Thursday evening, April 20.

Final round—Saturday afternoon and evening, April 22.

Superb playing technique marked today's hand, which was played by four of the finest tournament players in the country. A bad opening lead, good card placement and accurate counting all aided individualistic expert S. Garton Churchill in making two overtricks at his doubled part-score contract.

Travers LeGros was "Church's" partner; Charles Goren, of Philadelphia, and Harry Fishbein were the adversaries.

Today's Hand

Fishbein
♠ J 6 5 2

The bidding:

1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Redbl.	Pass
Pass	2 ♡	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♣

A part-score battle found the East-West players at two hearts doubled, and Fishbein picked an unfortunate lead, the king of clubs. Churchill won with the ace and tested the club suit by playing the jack, to which Fishbein followed, and then the queen. This South trumped with the deuce of hearts, and dummy overtrumped with the six. A low diamond away from the king put Goren in the lead with the jack, and somewhat on the "spot" he laid down the spade ace, and exited with the spade eight. Churchill had unblocked on the spade ace, throwing his ten, and won the eight with his king.

A Strategic Situation

He now finessed the heart queen, which held and stuck North again with the lead by playing the diamond king. Goren exited with a low diamond, which East trumped, and this strategic situation remained:

North: ♡ None; ◇ 9 3; ♣ 10 9
West: ♠ Q 9; ♡ A 7; ◇ None; ♣ None
East: ♠ 7; ♡ J 9; ◇ None; ♣ 5
South: ♠ J 6; ♡ K 8; ◇ None; ♣ None

Declarer led the heart jack, Fishbein refused to cover, and the jack held the trick. Churchill switching to spades and taking the finesse. Having a certain count on South's hand, "Church" ostentatiously played the spade queen before the heart ace, winning two hearts, doubled, with two extra tricks. He lost but two diamonds and a spade.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Danny Meadow Mouse Grows Careless

For mouse or man it never pays
To be possessed of careless ways.
—Old Mother Nature.

If in all the Great World there are many folks who more than others cannot afford to be careless, they are Danny Meadow Mouse and other members of his tribe. It takes a wise and smart Mouse to grow up. Yet, sir, it does so. You see there are so many smart people constantly looking for them by day and night that sometimes I have a queer feeling of something like respect for a Meadow Mouse or a Wood Mouse when I see one.

Both Danny Meadow Mouse and Whitefoot the Wood Mouse would tell you that they have many more dangers to watch out for than does their cousin Nibbler the House Mouse. This is true. And, so it seems to me, Danny of the open Green Meadows is in greater danger than Whitefoot of the Green Forest. The latter has many holes to dive into or things to hide under in times of danger, whereas Danny has but few. So Danny can least afford to be careless.

But Danny had grown careless. Nanny Meadow Mouse had noticed it and in her squeaky voice had scolded him for it. It was all because of the hard winter with a lot of snow covering the Green Meadows for weeks. While it was a hard winter for most of the people in fur and feathers, it wasn't a hard winter for Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse. It was quite the reverse. Living largely on grass as they do there was always food near at hand under the snow. And there were seeds to fe found under the snow and above, for many plants, the tops of which are above the snow, hold some of their seeds nearly all winter. To get these all that was necessary was to climb the stalk of a plant, digging a little hole to the surface, and making sure that the way was clear, then climb out to help themselves. If an enemy appeared down they dived and were out of shight and safe.

Early in the winter Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy had left that neighborhood to seek a place where there were fewer hunters. It wasn't long before Danny discovered that they were no longer about.

"I don't know what has happened but those Foxes are not around any more," said Danny to Nanny in his funny squeaky little voice.

"How do you know?" demanded Nanny.

"Can you remember so long a time when neither of them has thied to dig us out? squeaked Danny.

Nanny had to admit that she couldn't. "But they may return any time." said she cautiously.

"Time enough to worry about them when they do," replied Danny carelessly. "With them gone more than half our troubles have gone. Of course we must still watch out for Hooty the Owl at night and Roughleg the Hawk by day, but from both we are perfectly safe under the snow. They can't dig down the way Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy can. Some folks may not like snow, but I do. We are never so safe as when there is plenty of it. It is easy enough to dig tunnels through it, and we can move about just as we please with no fear that some one is going to pounce on us."

It was even so. And because there was so little in the way of real danger to watch for Danny Meadow Mouse grew careless. He went and came as he pleased along the little tunnels they had dug through the snow close to the ground, and almost forgot that there were any such people as Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy in all the Great World. Nanny wasn't so careless. She scolded Danny for his carelessness, but it did no good. It had become a habit and a habit grows.

FHA Sound, N. Y. Banker Tells Hearing

Schwulst Indorses Bill to Double Amount of Mortgages

By the Associated Press.

Earl B. Schwulst, first vice president of the Bowery Savings Bank of New York, told the House Banking Committee yesterday he was "convinced of the soundness" of the program of the Federal Housing Administration from the standpoint of both lending institutions and home owners.

He indorsed a bill to increase from $3,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 the amount of insured mortgages the FHA may have outstanding at any one time and to continue its authority to make loans on existing dwellings as well as new construction.

Schwulst said the national housing act gives home owners cheaper financing and acts as a curb on "jerry building"—cheap construction. Lending institutions benefit, he said, because they are able to "pool loan risks" and because savings banks are able to compete more effectively with building and loan associations.

Differences between the Home Ownrs Loan Corporation and the FHA over the latter's authority to insure mortgages on existing structures, already aired in the Senate, were brought before the committee by John H. Fahey, HOLC chairman.

"It is an unnecessary assumption of risk on the part of the Government," Fahey asserted.

He said there was a steadily declining demand for such insurance as well as a desire on the part of lending institutions to hold on to their loans. He suggested the FHA should direct all its activities to the stimulation of new construction and employment, adding that no employment is created by financing loans on dwellings already built.

Health Bureau Faces Record In Blood Tests

Overcrowding of working personnel and equipment, combined with a record-breaking volume of blood tests to be performed, had officials of the District Health Department laboratories worried yesterday.

While congestion is felt in the bacteriological and chemistry laboratories it is especially acute in the serological division, where Wassermann tests for syphilis are now being made at the rate of 1,500 a week, according to its chief, Dr. Jesse P. Porch.

An all-time record is virtually certain to be set this month, with 3,000 beauticians scheduled to be examined as prescribed by law, Dr. Porch said.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer and Dr. Porch pointed out that the maximum amount of work is being done in the crowded laboratory, which is housed on the second floor of the District Building.

Dr. Porch and three technicians are working overtime to complete the blood tests for the clinics and private physicians who send specimens to the laboratory. The former expressed anxiety that the beauticians, who have until April 15 to be examined, will wait until the last minute, resulting in a deluge of tests.

In 1931 the laboratory performed 11,576 Wassermanns. Last year the number was 50,470.

Medical Group Plan New Attack On Indictment

Attorneys for "organized medicine" today planned to draft a frontal attack on the Government's criminal conspiracy indictment of the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and associated groups and physicians.

Justice Proctor's overruling of a plea in abatement yesterday disposed of what was regarded as the last of the preliminary moves in the case and the next step was believed to be a demurrer. By this, the A. M. A. would claim that the healing art is not a "trade" and that laws against "restraint of trade" cannot apply to anything done by medical associations, and that none of the campaign against Group Health Associations, Inc., which brought on the indictment, was criminal or was the result of an unlawful conspiracy.

House MayCensure Miss Perkins for Bridges' Attitude

By the Associated Press.

Members of the House Judiciary Committee indicated yesterday that their disposition of an impeachment resolution against Secretary Perkins would depend on whether she followed "unusual procedure" in deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, C. I. O. maritime leader on the West Coast.

They said impeachment charges filed by Representative Thomas (Republican), of New Jersey, could not be justified, but that the question whether the Cabinet member should be censured for apparently deviating from normal steps in deportation proceedings remained to be decided.

R. P. Bonham and R. J. Norene, Pacific Northwest immigration officials, are said to have testified that the Labor Department took the "unusual" course of discarding much of the case they had worked up against Bridges.

5,300 Shuffle Through Line As Income Tax Deadline Nears

Upward of 5,300 Capital salary earners and property owners shuffled in line through yesterday at the Bureau of Internal Revenue as the deadline approached for income tax payments at midnight tonight.

The line, formed before the bureau opened, lengthened as business offices and the Government departments were closed in late afternoon, with more than 100 in line at times.

Record throngs of taxpayers were expected to jam into the bureau today with the usual last minute rush to avoid penalty assessments augmented by the fact that it is a Government payday.

To cope with crowds greater than those of last year, when crowds lined up from the doors of the bureau up Twelfth street as far as Pennsylvania avenue, extra guards will be put on duty today with clerks shifting from one department to another as the rush demands, officials reported.

The filing routine is expected to speed up as midnight draws nearer, as the rush shifts from people seeking assistance in making out reports to those merely requiring notarization of their returns

Speediest of income tax payers are straight salary earners who required the notarization and acceptance of payment while most time is required by large property owners with various classfication of income report, is was said.

Nation returns for the first 11 days of this month totaled only $60,324,256 as compared with $76,209,440 in the corresponding period last year. Collections for March are expected to fall below those of the same month in 1938 by $200,000,000.

District tax payers, who pay only Federal assessments, will not be as rushed as Maryland residents working in the District who have to file an additional return at Annapolis by midnight. Virginia residents have until June 1 to file their State returns.

D. C. Shotgun Bandit Slain In Los Angeles

Man Killed in Holdup Identified as Last of Two Long-Sought Here

Death in a gun battle with Los Angeles police has closed the transcontinental crime career of the last of Washington's shotgun bandits.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation notified Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of the Washington detective bureau, last night that Carl Reid, trapped and slain by police in a Los Angeles hold up, was the man sought here as third member of a robbery gang whose favorite weapon was the shotgun.

Thompson said FBI fingerprint files disclosed the Los Angeles hold-up March 7 to have been the Washington fugitive's last crime.

Reid fled across the country, Thompson said, because his confederates, awaiting trial in the District Jail, had accused him of deserting them and had sworn vengance. On the West Coast, Thompson said, Reid used the name of Willard Hayes.

The gang was credited by police with 15 hold-ups in Washington and Arlington County. William Charles Wright, 21, of Arlington, and Albert E. Smith, 30, of the 1400 block of Sixth street northwest, allegedly Reid's accomplices, were captured by police here on complete descriptions furnished by William Allen and Emory Johnson, employes of an Arlington drug store, scene of their last hold-up attempt. Wright and Smith are in jail on robbery charges.
